END OF SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major departments stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also know as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

From Siphoning Out A Pot Of Water To Sailing Off Into The Sunset

By Dan Rattiner

Some people are natural handymen. Give them a job to do around the house, they strap on a tool belt, and they get the job done. I am not one of these people. On the other hand, my girlfriend, Cat, IS one of these people. Last Sunday was my birthday and in the afternoon we were cleaning and fixing up the house. There'd be a birthday dinner. Cat was in full handyman gear and she was fixing a molding in the kitchen, hammering in the bathroom, building a windowbox for outside the studio. I was in the study, picking up the newspaper that had been set down for the puppy we are training.

"The West Nile Virus Has Struck Again In Staten Island," a Newsday headline said adjacent to a wet spot. There was a photo of a planter at the bottom of a downspout that had filled with water.

"Don't allow standing water to collect," the caption read. "It breeds these mosquitos."

By God, I thought, we have one of those planters outside our house. I saw the Great Dane drinking out of it earlier today.

I roused myself, passed Cat by the kitchen sink, went out the slider and examined this big ceramic planter at the back of the house. It was big enough to hold a cedar tree. But all that was in it was water, water with a lot of bugs swimming around.

The planter, two feet high and two feet in diameter, was far too heavy for anybody to move filled with water as it was. (I could imagine our planter. That way in minutes, I'd get the dirty water out of the planter, around the house and down the driveway. Brilliant.

There is a spigot out by the front of the house. I walked around to it. No hose there. I went into the garage. No hose there. Where was the hose?

While looking, of course, I had concocted another brilliant scheme about how to make the hose (once found) into a siphon. Rather than create it by dunking both ends into the swimming pool by the planter, which was my original thought, I had a far better idea. Attach the hose at the spigot, put the other end into the planter, then go back to the spigot, turn it on, wait ten seconds, then disconnect it from the spigot and with the water now running the other way, walk the four steps out to the driveway and drop it. Wow! This thinking was worthy of a gasoline thief!

Now where was that damn hose? Then I remembered. I had walked it across the street to the dock — we live across from Town Dock in East Hampton — and had stuck it on our 16 foot sailboat. I'd found a basement pump, gotten an extension four teenagers succeeding to do so and sloshing water on themselves and then dying.) Anyway, you wouldn't want to pour out this standing water at the back of the house. It was disgusting. The place to pour it out would be on the driveway down at the front of the house. It would then pour out down to the street and into a storm drain there.

What to do? I got a brainstorm. I'd get a garden hose, run it around the house to the lower driveway, turn it into a siphon and stick one end into the

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Sag Harbor's Spalding Gray was a big hit on Broadway opening night Sunday night in the revival of Gore Vidal's The Best Man. New York Times reviewer Ben Brantley describes Gray's performance of a presidential candidate as delightful, low key and eccentric. He also says that Gray gets the best lines. And you thought he was just a monologist. See the play also starring Chris Noth, Michael Learned and Charles Durning at the Virginia Theatre on West 52nd Street.

Incidentally, among Hamptonites attending the opening were Dick Cavett of Montauk, Elaine May, Sara Jessica Parker and Carrie Nye, Dick Cavett's wife.

Don't miss the book signing this Sunday for Dan Rattiner's new book, Ballet Parking, his first cartoon book. It will be from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. at The Paradise Café in Sag Harbor.

East Hampton's Ralph Lauren has designed a limited edition T-shirt with a pink pony on it, a chic reminder of his charity the Pink Pony Campaign against Breast Cancer. Actress Penelope Cruz was photographed wearing this item at Ralph's show at Fashion Week.

Many Hamptonites were invited for dinner honoring Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee at the White House last Sunday. Among them were Christie Brinkley and Peter Cook, Deepak Chopra, Mr. & Mrs. John Catsimadedes, Chevy and Janie Chase, Al Franken, Geraldine Laybourne, Star Jones, Denise Rich, Craig Natiello, and quite a few others.

Commander Todd Nelson of the United States Coast Guard has announced the decommissioning ceremony for the largest ship in the Long Island Coast Guard fleet, the Point Wells. It will take place on Friday, October 13, at the Montauk Coast Guard Station.

Happy Birthday Ruth Vered!

Bridgehampton's Rona Jaffe will be at the Rainbow Room in Manhattan next Wednesday evening to host the Rona Jaffe Writers Award. Guest speaker will be Patricia Bosworth.

Cindy Adams is throwing a one year old birthday party for her Yorkshire terrier, Jazzy in Manhattan next week. Among those attending are jeweler Judith Ripka, fashion designer, Joanna Pastriani, Bryant Gumbel and Isabella Rossellini, all of whom are bringing their dogs.

Southampton's Denise Rich has announced her annual G&P Foundation gala for cancer research at the Mariotte Marquis on November 30. Honorary Chair is President Bill Clinton, emcee is Larry cord, and had pumped out the boat with this rig. The hose was still on the boat.

I walked across the street to the slip I rent, and immediately saw that one of my teenage sons had used the boat and failed to tie it back up properly. The bow line was attached to the wooden ladder okay. But the stern lines were just hanging from the pullies I had put up on the pilings beyond the stern. This boat is so short it does not completely fill the slip. And so, without stern lines, it was banging free and was, specifically, banging a 50 foot million dollar yacht parked in the next slip on the side. This was terrible. I made a mental note to yell at the appropriate teenager. But that would have to wait. This would have to be fixed immediately.

I climbed aboard the sailboat, pushed on the side of the big yacht to move the sailboat toward the pilings and realized the bow line was not long enough. The sailboat would only go so far, and I couldn't reach the pullies. I'd need what is called a gaff hook, a wooden stick with a metal hook on the end, to get the two stern lines off the pilings.

Meanwhile, though there were no markings (yet) on the yacht, there certainly soon would be if the sailboat kept this up. Since the wind was blowing my boat toward the yacht, I found a rope on board, pushed the sailboat away from the yacht and lassoed a cleat on board the medium size boat on the other side and then tied up to it. This would work, at least for awhile. As long as the wind did not change anyway.

And so, I climbed off the sailboat and went on a search to find somebody at one of the other boats with a gaff hook. I wound my way down the dock, finding nobody, and soon was all the way to the boatyard. Yes, there was someone there with a gaff hook I could borrow, but he had gone off for ten minutes for some Root Beer and I'd have to wait. I waited.

Fifteen minutes later, they said they were closing and so I would have to buy a gaff hook. I bought one. $80. And I returned with it to my slip, climbed aboard, and leaned out over the sailboat's stern to gaff the stern lines. I got one briefly, then lost my grip on the hook and it fell into the water and floated away.

At this point, having just spent $80, I realized I would have to go get it. And as a matter of fact, it was a beautiful evening with the sun just getting ready to set across the hills of Northwest, and so I backed out of the slip by pushing my way along the yacht, raised the sail and headed off in the direction of the floating gaff.

Half an hour later, Cat walked down to the slip. From the window, she had seen me in the sailboat.

"I could use some help," she shouted out to me. "All you're doing is sailing."

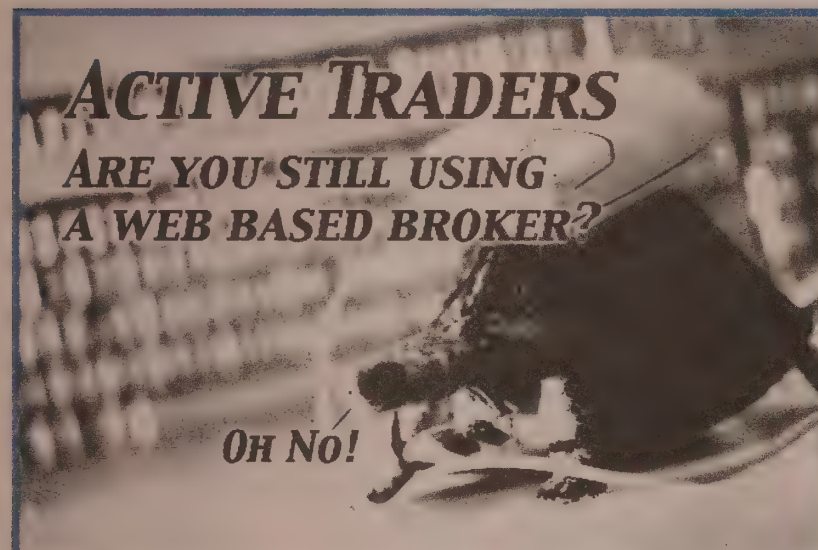

The wind was strong. I had gone downwind and was trying desperately, and unsuccessfully, to tack back.

That evening, over dinner, one of the teenagers gave me a card for my birthday. On the front was a picture of the Titanic, just a little bit down at the stern.

"This is not you," the kid said. "But I thought you'd like it."

WELL, THE DUCT TAPE SEEMS TO BE HOLDING UP SO FAR, the caption read.

Inside, the card read IF DAD WERE ON THE TITANIC.

AT THE NEW FANCY BAGEL SHOP

Bagels Vs. Donuts

In The Battle For Men's Stomachs, Bagels And Donuts Achieve A Stand Off

By Dan Rattiner

It wasn't so long ago that donuts and bagels lived happily side by side. The bagels were available in Jewish neighborhoods, handmade in the old fashioned way, and donuts, either powdered or plain, were available in markets and diners across America.

Donuts had been invented in WWII, when everything was rationed and it was found that if you took the center out of sweet roll, the GIs ate it anyway and got just about as full. It came home after VE-Day on troop ships and it found its way into the canteens and USO outfits in the big cities and then out into the countryside.

If the makers of donuts and bagels were satisfied that the "turf" was clearly defined, there were a few entrepreneurs who saw it differently and went out to make trouble. In 1950, Dunkin Donuts was founded by J.P. Dunkin and pretty soon drive-in Dunkin Donuts stores were everywhere. In 1953, Mrs. Dunkin, experimenting in the kitchen at home in Larchmont, accidentally spilled a jar of honey on a rack of donuts. Curious, she wondered what they would taste like if baked. They were delicious.

It was a development that was as important to America and as similar in many ways as Madame Curie's accidental discovery of radium in 1898.

By 1960, Dunkin Donuts were everywhere. There were honey dipped chocolate flavored donuts, there were coconut topped vanilla flavored glazed donuts. And then there was the discovery of the jelly donut by one of the Dunkin children who everywhere. They had squirreled their way into delis, supermarkets, little country stores and even farm stands. But I, having grown up in Manhattan and the suburbs, which was bagel country, was appalled to find that no bagel had ever set foot east of the Shinnecock Canal.

It would only be on my trips back to my old stomping grounds in Manhattan that I would load up. When people would come out from the city I'd urge them to bring a dozen or two. There is nothing like a New York bagel, as anyone living anywhere else in the country will attest.

In 1967, packs of bagels appeared in the frozen food section of the A&P, Bohack's and other stores in the community. They were made by a company called Lenders, they were stamped out of soft chewy dough and they were, in my opinion, the worst thing that could have happened to a bagel.

People from Jewish neighborhoods in the city who visited the Hamptons at that time suggested that Lenders – and I was only able to serve visitors Lenders bagels – was secretly a subsidiary of the

was in medical school and found himself injecting jelly into one of his father's products.

Soon donuts assumed a vast share of the hollow center market as it is called, while bagels remained on the periphery.

It was at 19, as a college student, that I made the decision to found Dan's Papers and commit myself to a life in the Hamptons. Donuts were

Dunkin' Corporation. These were dark times.

All of this was to change in 1974, however. It was then that, in a laboratory at the University of Maryland during a lunchtime break, someone decided to try the donut concept of interesting flavors on bagels. There had always been poppy or sesame bagels as well as plain, of course. Those simple flavor variations have been served since Biblical times, when there were large Jewish settlements in Egypt and Babylonia. (Both sesame and poppy grow in great abundance in the Fertile Crescent of the Tigris and Euphrates.)

But now there were onion bagels and garlic bagels and bagels rolled in salt and by 1979, bagels rolled in just about everything they could find appeared on the market. They were called Everything Bagels and they were a smash. Bagels stores began to sprout up throughout the landscape. Bagels even made inroads into such bastions of Christianity as Des Moines, Iowa and Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

Here in the Hamptons, the first bagel store opened on County Road 39 in 1981. It was greeted with wild enthusiasm throughout the community even in places where bagels had never been tasted before, such as on the cocktail trays of the Southampton social set, who served plain bagels, untoasted spread with either jelly, ham, or, sometimes, when they were feeling wildly daring, tuna fish.

Personally, it was a great day for me when the first bagel store opened. There they were in our community, handmade, in every flavor, accompanied by everything from smoked herring to Brooklyn style chocolate egg cremes, bottled to be sure, by the SoHo Bottling Company, but pretty good, nevertheless.

Pretty soon bagel stores were cropping up everywhere and in 1985, when Surgeon General Koop declared war on cigarettes and other cancer causing consumables, fried donuts were revealed for what they really are: a heart attack with a hole in it. Sales plummeted, and the balance of power tipped.

In 1989, the year salsa replaced ketchup as America's favorite condiment, the bagel share of the round hole market exceeded that of donuts for the first time. That lead would grow and grow until, finally, in 1995, a group of wealthy investors bought a small chain of donut bakeries in South Carolina known as Krispy Kreme. These were, by far, the best tasting donuts ever created on the face of the planet.

One could go at dawn to the main factory of Krispy Kreme factory, just outside of Savannah, Georgia and taste just a little piece of heaven as they came off the assembly line and into boxes, hot, to be served by counter people wearing white aprons and white chef's hats.

The investment team expanded Krispy Kreme throughout the South and in 1998 they opened their first Krispy Kreme in Manhattan. Patrons fled the bagel stores in droves. Sales plummeted. Pretty soon there was a second Krispy Kreme store in Manhattan, and then a third.

And that's where the matter stands today. Although no Krispy Kreme is yet to open out here in the Hamptons, a pretty close replica of it can be found early in the morning at a place called Fletcher's on County Rd 39 by Moses Lane in Southampton. On the other hand, the Krispy Kreme people have begun wholesale deliveries. You can buy them every morning fresh at the Hess Station markets. They are made at a Krispy Kreme bakery in Brooklyn.

Interestingly, the original Hampton Bagel store burned down in a great fire in 1996. There were many other competitors in the area by that time, so it was not a totally devastating loss as far as the bagel share of the market was concerned. By 1997, however, Hampton Bagel had reopened and had for the first time won the title given out by Dan's Papers for Best Bagel in the Hamptons.

Hampton Bagel won that title again the next year and in 1999, but at that time an outfit called Twice Upon A Bagel also won in the category of Best Everything Bagel, creating one product that our judges deemed extraordinary.

The new millennium finds parity in the round center hole market war as of September 15. Whether bagels or donuts hold sway again, or whether some third and as yet unknown round center hole product emerges to take the market by storm, will be something we will just have to wait and see. Competition is what made America what it is today, and whatever happens you can bet it will be interesting and good to eat, too.

State Department Of Parks Is Considering A Plan To Create A Memorial To World War II

By Dan Rattiner

Perhaps the most beautiful undeveloped land in Montauk extends four miles, from the grounds of the Montauk Lighthouse, westward along the bluffs of the Atlantic Ocean through rolling hills, until finally it ends at a group of oceanfront private homes owned by the likes of photographers Peter Beard and Richard Avedon, singer Paul Simon and TV personality Dick Cavett. In other words, here begins the eastern edge of the "Hamptons."

Interestingly, since the construction of the Lighthouse in 1796, there has never been a private residential development proposed for this four mile stretch of land. That is because the United States government has always used this stretch of land as a shield against any enemy of this country who might try to attack by sea.

I was not born on the east end, but my family moved to Montauk when I was sixteen back in the late 1950s. I have vivid memories of exploring around in the scrub woods of this stretch of land. You'd go out to the Lighthouse in your car, then park in the vast tourist parking lot there. Then you'd spend an afternoon walking west along the cliff to look through what were then mostly abandoned military facilities from the Second World War. Along the trail, deep in the woods, you'd come upon the concrete pad that supported an anti-aircraft gun. Around it there were tunnels extending down into the ground, where you could climb down to ammunition stores and headquarters command posts. Large steel bolts were still in the concrete pad where you could, someday, bring back some anti-aircraft gun if, god forbid, some Russian bomber jets came over. Half a mile further to the west, there were the remains batteries, of the sort you would see in the movie Guns of Navarone or aboard the battleship Missouri. A huge steel reinforced concrete hood had been built over these guns to protect them from air attacks. The guns themselves were mounted into shallow concrete caves and were half in and half out of the caves, pointing seaward.

Further to the west was a big chain link fence that marked the adjacent property, owned by the United States Air Force and still in use in the late 1950s. Because it was still in business, we wouldn't go in there. Nearby, there was an entrance with a big steel gate that came up and down, and a little booth manned by a guard with radio and sidearms. If you got permission you could go inside. Inside there was a huge radar tower that constantly turned around. Also several research and radio laboratories.

This base, the 773rd, had been built around 1951, when the North Korean Communists, about 600,000 strong, attempted to overrun South Korea. The United States intervened. Then the Chinese intervened on the side of the North Koreans. By 1953, almost a million men had died, including 41,000 Americans. It had been fought to a standstill, with the final cease fire line almost exactly where the

of a World War II Army camp, which included a rec hall disguised as a church, an officer's club disguised as a little red school house, and a cluster of barracks disguised as a little fishing village. If, during World War II, you had flown overhead in a Junkers Bomber, you would have thought this was just a peaceful little community.

Finally, built into the top of the cliff, facing out into the ocean, there were two massive shore former border had been between North and South Korea. It is referred to today as the Forgotten War, wedged in between World War II and the Vietnam War.

Here at Montauk, though, it galvanized the government to build this Air Force shield alongside the Army Shield build just ten years before.

Today, both the 773rd Air Force Base and the Army's Camp Hero are abandoned deep in the woods of this hilly land which is now under the jurisdiction of the New York State Park Commission. Commissioner Bernadette Castro had proposed a golf course on the site, but it had received almost universal opposition and it had been withdrawn. Then, during last summer, I had attended a fundraiser deep in the woods of the Mashimuet Reserve on Shelter Island. You parked your car and you walked a mile or so. And there, deep in the middle of this preserve, was the late 19th century mansion of the railroad baron who had bought that property as his private estate so many years ago.

For some reason, as I was walking along the gravel path that led to this estate, it suddenly made me think of Montauk. What if people parked at the parking lot at the Montauk Lighthouse, and then walked, on foot, the two miles of path I had walked as a teenager, through the disguised village, big guns, anti-aircraft guns and underground tunnels that constituted Camp Hero? It could be a War Memorial in the woods to World War II? As a matter of fact, other than the battleship Arizona which is a war memorial to Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, I cannot think of any major war memorial of this sort in America to mark this largest of all wars where half a million Americans died.

That fall, I wrote an article suggesting that the New York State Parks Commission consider such a walking tour as a War Memorial. I published it this past spring. And guess what. It is in the planning stages.

I spoke to Commissioner Castro a week ago, at her home where she lives in Nassau County, and she said that she was a regular reader of Dan's Papers, and that to create this war memorial park there she has already ordered the first two of a three stage operation. The first stage, already completed, has been the identification of all World War II buildings, also the Radar Tower site, and the marking of any toxic material that would need to be removed to make the property safe. The second stage, is the removal of this toxic material, together with the tearing down of any unsafe structures. The Shaw & Elliott Corporation has been hired by the State to do this and has been doing it since the spring. They should be finished by year's end.

"The final stage," she said, "will be the creation of the walk and the historic sites. We will probably have as the centerpiece the rec hall that was built to resemble a church, also the 'fake' fishing village. I am also hoping we can refurbish the radar tower and install at least one of the two sixteen inch shore batteries."

I told her that when we first moved here, I remembered hearing these guns being fired out to sea. It had been a military exercise. The sound rattled the glasses in the cabinets in my family's home ten miles away. They conducted these exercises half a dozen times before the guns, around 1960, finally went quiet for the last time.

But maybe this would not be the last time. Wouldn't it be cool to fire a round every Fourth of July?

Local Filmmaker Matthew Coppola Gets His New Movie Into The Hamptons Film Festival

By Joan Zandell

Mathew Coppola and I agree to meet at Gurney's where I plan to interview him, sitting in the sun, overlooking the ocean. We choose to meet at the reservations desk and although I am not sure who it is I am looking for, and I haven't offered to carry a red carnation to announce that it is I, I trust that somehow I'll know him intuitively. Twenty years in the film industry, and I think I might be able to spot one of my own. Besides, movie people have "a look." They are hip yet comfortable, wearing remnants of college clothing - tee shirts, jeans, sneakers, and for men the requisite flannel shirt as ersatz jacket. When they've truly arrived, the adolescent look is peppered with Armani.

Sitting in an armchair, properly rumped, is my man. I introduce myself and we head towards the deck walking along the sea. For a moment this feels like a cutaway, walk and talk from a Barbara Walter's Special and I can imagine the camera following us as we agree on the table where our interview will take place and sit down.

Coppola is twenty-eight years old and has just there was the money to shoot the film, then there was the money for post production, and now there is the money to transfer it to thirty-five millimeter for the Festival."

Mathew grew up in Huntington, Long Island.

Eleven years ago, his parents built and moved into a house in Montauk, where his mother now lives. After graduating from the University of Vermont, Mathew moved out to L.A. to learn about making movies by working in the industry. He worked all sorts of jobs - as a production assistant and set assistant to Christopher Guest. He worked as a grip, he worked in electric, in the art department, and finally as a camera loader for such reputable cinematographers as Yanush Kaminsky and Vilmos Zsigmund. He believes that it was the best education he completed his first feature film. He calls it Fresh Cut Grass, and like most Indie film makers he has written the script, directed the film and raised the money to produce it. "Raising the money is an on-going thing," says Coppola. "First ever could have gotten. By finally doing his own film he has learned that "it's not about the film – it's about a product. No one will care as much as you do. People will be helpful, but making your own film is hard."

Just how strenuous is difficult for most people to imagine.

When it was time to start production, Coppola gave up his apartment in L.A., piled everything he owned into his car and headed cross-country arriving in the Hamptons at the end of February. He set up his offices in Bridgehampton where they remained in pre-production for several months.

The narrative behind the script for Fresh Cut Grass tells a story close to Coppola's own. His father died his freshman year in college. That summer while trying to come to grips with his loss, he cut lawns in the Hamptons. There are things that happened to him that have found their way into the story – in that respect the film is semi-autobiographical. He did not fall in love the summer he cut lawns. The female character is an ideal woman that is an amalgamation of all the women he has ever loved or has imagined loving. The actress Katie Hansz embodied that fantasy.

Once the script was written and the initial money was raised, how did he proceed?

Not unlike Woody Allen, Coppola sent out breakdowns, but refused to show the script.

It was only during callbacks that he began to show the script. He auditioned 400 New York actors from which he had to choose six principles. The script called for a total of twenty-six actors in the film, including bit parts.

The action takes place in familiar Hamptons haunts like The Lobster Roll, the Montauk Beer and Soda, Brent's, Ronnie's and private houses from East Hampton to Montauk. There is even a scene at the Horton Point Lighthouse. The shooting schedule took place over eighteen days that ended on May 20, before the summer season began.

Because Coppola was shooting on a limited budget, he could not afford to process and therefore see dailies. Dailies are all the scenes from one day of shooting. Most filmmakers have them processed overnight and watch them at the end of the next day. If there are errors or there is a need to re-shoot a particular scene, they will be detected in the dailies. Without the ability to view what you've already shot, making the film becomes an act of faith. As it turned out nothing needed to be re-shot, and once they were into the editing portion of the film everything came together far better than Coppola had ever expected.

There is a twist to the true story that is quite heart-breaking. Coppola's father had died of cancer. His mother did eventually remarry. She fell in love with and married a man who worked at the Art of Eating. As ironic as only destiny could have it, he died of leukemia this past summer just as they were finishing post-production on Fresh Cut Grass.

Now it is autumn in the Hamptons and Coppola has just gotten his first film into the Hamptons Film Festival. "I've never been to a film festival ever." Says Coppola, "I promised myself I wouldn't go until I was entered in one. Besides, I wanted to have my first screening at the Hamptons Film Festival. The film is about this place, it was filmed and made here, why would I want to show it anywhere else?"

Coppola clearly loves Montauk. He wrote the script there believing that "it's a great place for what you need to do internally."

As for being a filmmaker, he says "being a filmmaker is the best thing. Being able to take what you have in your mind and translate it into film is the best thing in the world."

Didn't his mother wish that her son would have chosen something more sensible like being a lawyer or an investment banker?

"Of course. And there is the financial reality of filmmaking. Aside from all the hard money raising work up front, there are also time and financial constraints that force you to prioritize in every shot. But at the end of the day, there is nothing like telling a good story. I couldn't do anything else."

If you plan on attending the Hamptons Film Festival next month, be on the lookout for this sincerely engaging young man, and talented young filmmaker known as Mathew Coppola and his first feature film, Fresh Cut Grass. •

Spanish-American War Re-Enactment Is Held At A Ranch In Montauk

By Ben Amato

"A nation's potential for greatness lies in the present with roots in the past. We're here to celebrate that glorious past," said Teddy Roosevelt nearly a century ago. Those words echoed through the hills of Camp Wikoff at Theodore Roosevelt County Park last weekend, where the Spanish-American War came alive, with Teddy and his Rough Riders patrolling Montauk Point, as they did over one hundred years ago.

The Spanish American War Society brought the past into the present by recreating Camp Wikoff, home for the 32,000 soldiers General Schafter victoriously commanded during the liberation of Cuba from the Spanish Empire. An authentic encampment dotted the hills, with dozens of canvas tents set against the lush green meadows of this county park. Participants came from around the nation; New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, New Jersey, North and South Carolina, Connecticut and California, dressed, equipped and living as the Rough Riders did so long ago.

"Today's youth is historically challenged," said Jim Michaud, the leader of the 71st New York Volunteers. "You can read a book but you don't know what it was like. By staging reenactments, you get a deeper respect for what they went through." Jim is from Rockville Center, in Nassau County. He is a history buff and collector of military memorabilia. "We want to perpetuate the life of the common soldier. This state militia was the only unit that went up San Juan Hill," he added proudly.

Jim brought a half dozen volunteers to this reenactment, outfitted in the uniforms, weaponry and attitudes held by the men who fought so well are gathered here on hallowed ground. Many men were lost here, for Camp Wikoff was a quarantined camp. Disease killed more soldiers than bullets did — malaria and yellow fever."

James is from Sea Cliff, Long Island. He's a retired machinist, who because of his love for the past and a strong resemblance to this heroic President, turned a twenty year old hobby into a full time career. "It's my passion to do Teddy Roosevelt. I have marched in parades, lobbied Congress on behalf of the National Conservatory and even met Rick Lazio on the steps of the Capitol. I told him it was time to toss his hat into the ring.

"This war was the one that brought the country back together as the United States, after the turmoil of the Civil War," said James. "It was a just war, not just to capture territory but to strengthen the Monroe Doctrine. The Cubans wanted independence." James has spent much of his adult lifetime reading and researching the life of this President. He is the author of the book Rough Riders, which did not fare as well as its namesake. "The critics were amazed that the printer did not run out of the letter I," author Foote said about his painful literary expedition. But concerning his in 1898.

"In time of righteous war, our nation's people are ready to die for their country. We're here to pay homage to those men who served in the truly forgotten war, the Spanish-American War," said James Foote, a professional actor who tours the country portraying President Teddy Roosevelt. "We performance as the young Roosevelt, he was "fit as a bull moose," as he put it.

Equipped with Roosevelt's swaggering attitude, he addressed the audience prior to the reenactment of a battle pitting the Spanish Army against the U.S. cavalry. He explained the politics behind the war.

"President McKinley was a true president, from the neck up. From the neck down, he had the backbone of a chocolate éclair. But he did one thing right. He enlisted former Confederate officers into the army."

Participant and antique gun collector Brian Gosling feels that "this is the war that made us one. In 1898, the Civil War was a fresh thing. This war mobilized the nation to fight the Spanish Empire. A volunteer regiment was formed, the Rough Riders, gentlemen soldiers. The son of Tiffany, the famous jeweler, was there and was killed. Buffalo soldiers, the black soldiers calvary fought there under Pershing. That's how he got his name, Black Jack Pershing. As for Roosevelt, he became a national hero, then Governor of New York and then the President. The entire U.S. Army Regulars were only 25,000 strong with our Cuban Expeditionary forces numbering 16,000 men. They were facing 200,000 Spanish veterans, who had been fighting a guerrilla war for over thirty years.

But that was their weakness, their forces were spread out."

As an expert in weaponry from that era, Brian told of the disadvantages our soldiers endured.

"The Spanish Army was equipped with German Mausers, with a block action clip. These outclassed our guns. The 1891 Krag's given to our men could fit five bullets into a rotary chamber and one in the bolt. The Spanish could load twice as fast. But the Krag's were good enough. The saying was 'civilize them with a Krag.' They are 30 caliber weapons, with forty grains of black smokeless powder. Their effective range was over 300 yards.

Judy Gordon of the Suffolk County Parks Department organizes historical events throughout Suffolk County. The success of this event has her planning to make it an annual homage paid to those who fought and died, both in Cuba and at Montauk Point.

Brian Gosling would be all for that, for he feels that "the basic motivation of why we are here is to perpetuate our American military heritage. To inform and educate, to remind all of the words of Teddy Roosevelt, Honor God and do your duty. The obligation of citizenship is to be ready to sacrifice in the interest of our nation."

That message was as clear as the shots fired by those reenacting the glorious war against the Spanish. Theodore Roosevelt County Park houses memorabilia and displays from that era in Third House, the Army's headquarters built during the Rough Rider's stay at Montauk. A gift shop operated by Friends for Long Island Heritage sells unique items and souvenirs related to the Spanish-American War and is located on the first floor of this historic building. The exhibits and shop are open to the public until Columbus Day, Wednesday through Sunday, from 10:00 a.m. until 5:00 p.m.. A visit there will remind us all of the sacrifices made in the name of nationalism and patriotism. They were proud to be Americans and after a short time on the historic grounds of this park, most visitors will feel that pride too.

By Janet Berg

If there are six billion people in the world, and only one out of every 100 million scores as high as 195 on their IQ, I can say (without doing the math) that 43-year-old Chris Langan is one of the smartest people in the world.

As a child, he was extremely gifted: speaking at six months of age, reading before he was four, and writing his first book, Snakes, Lizards and Turtles, at five.

I had no idea this prodigy lived right around the bend from me, until I saw Mr. Langan being interviewed on ABC's show, 20/20, aired on July 13. A neuropsychologist hired by 20/20, tested Langan's IQ for hours and concluded his IQ was 'off the charts' and could not even be measured. Yet he works as a part-time bouncer at a bar in Westhampton Beach and supports himself on about $6,000 a year, a lifestyle you would hardly expect from someone whose intellectual caliber is compared to that of Albert Einstein, Issac Newton, Mozart and Michelangelo.

Apparently, Chris had a negative experience in school as a gifted child and later dropped out of college, as no one took an interest in him and he became bored.

Going over a rickety old bridge in a little duck town, I found his humble home and I waited in my car in the pouring rain until he was ready. Outside his cottage, I noticed his non-functioning old red Porsche and his Harley Davidson motorcycle.

When Chris got in the car, I was amazed to see by his Herculean stature that he was not just a "mental giant," and later I would find out why he was so fixated on muscle.

Aside from his rich, deep laugh, I sensed a profound seriousness to this man on the car ride over to where we would emulate our "Happy Days" date and I would interview him over a banana split.

By the time he was into his second scoop, I learned about his beliefs, his goals, his wisdom, and his purpose. He took a long pause and let me know that he was happy with what he ordered: "Ice cream helps because talking makes my throat sore," he said in a childlike fashion.

Q: Tell me about your background. What was it like for you growing up?

A: I had three little brothers. I was the oldest. I was the precocious one at a very early age. I lived in a succession of very small towns. After the age of five or so, when my mother remarried for the second time, we became the poorest family in most of the towns we lived in. There was never enough food around or anything like that. We were like the town urchins, I guess you'd have to say. And that lasted 'til I was about fourteen, when I physically ejected my stepfather for his tendency towards domestic violence.

And after that, I just had to wait it out and finish high school, although I qualified to leave when I was thirteen years old. If there's no one to sponsor you, you just sit it out. So, I sat it out and spent a large amount of time in the library and study hall, because that was the only place they could put me. I hardly ever even showed up in my senior year.

I did manage to graduate, but I couldn't attend my graduation ceremony because they could not find a cap that would fit me. School was not a good memory. Not just because I was, so to speak, smarter than the other kids; it had more to do with being poor and persecuted and kicked around for that reason. It was not what I would call a "childhood." My brothers and I spent a little time in foster homes.

Who's Here:

Chris Langan Genius

Q: Did you have any friends in school?

A: No. I had no friends in school. Children can be quite cruel. They tend to turn on those who are less fortunate. Actually, my brothers and I attended Catholic Church on Sundays and we only had one set of clothes apiece, and they were all full of holes. The other kids would show up in their red blazers and we took a horrible amount of abuse from them because of the way we were dressed. It seemed so hypocritical to me.

Q: How is your relationship with your family now?

A: My mother and brothers still live out west and we stay in touch. I love my mom in spite of her many failings; and I'm sure she would say the same of me. She also had a rough road.

Q: What happened to your real father?

A: According to my mom, my real dad died before I was born.

Q: And your stepfather. Tell me about him.

A: My old man (stepfather) wasn't the most popular guy around town. He had a knack for making enemies. He was a reporter

Q: A reporter? I gulped.

A: He was a master of the poison pen. He rapidly disaggregated himself in a series of cow towns in which we lived. In Nevada for about 3 or 4 years, then Wyoming about the same amount of time, then Montana.

Q: How did you end up in New York?

A: My uncle, a very dear friend of my family, Norman Stromm, who was an outdoor writer, was originally from Long Island. He went out to Montana and became one of the foremost outdoor writers in the country, and published around fifteen books. Because of that, we met a lot of people from New York, including a woman who begged me to come out here and live with her. That didn't last. (Chris is currently dating a clinical neuropsychologist and says he would someday like to have children.)

Q: What did you do in Montana?

A: It's called Big Sky Country. My stepfather and I did "Mustanging," where we went on to the Indian Reservation and catch wild ponies. We would bring them home and I would break them. I would ride them and then we would sell them. It took a lot of rough, physical action. At twelve I did bull riding in the rodeo. And I'd ride until the bell.

Then, my summer job in high school was cowhand or cowboy. I'd ride a horse when we took the cows from the summer ranch and bring them down to the winter ranch, twice a year. The rest of the time, I was doing irrigating and stacking hay. It was very hard work - fourteen hours a day. I got paid $200 a month, plus room and board and he took taxes out of that. There were no days off.

Q: What did your mom do?

A: She worked in a state mental hospital in Wyoming as a nurse. So, she was actually gone a lot during the days, which is when problems would arise. My stepfather would drink and I'd come home from where I was abused at school to be abused by him.

Q: You moved a lot?

A: We'd go to pow wows and I lived in teepees for a while. I lived in a little town called "Dogpatch," and I was very used to Indian Reservation life. I had a good friend named "Mark Big Roads," who was a medicine man. That's how I learned the tricks of the trade. We would talk a little Indian with each other. (Chris demonstrates). And we'd say grace before meals. I have good memories of associating with my Indian friends. It was good, too, because we were very poor and the Indians would give us some of their rations. Unfortunately, half the time, the weevils already got at the stuff. My brothers and I would put out the cornmeal we'd eat and we had to separate it from the insect larvae before we cooked it up.

Q: Who were your role models? Who inspired you?

A: Plato and Aristotle. I loved Leonardo Da Vinci. He was great. I love all the Renaissance geniuses. All were motivated by basically the same thing that motivates me, which is the desire to understand the reality in which we live. Anybody who is willing to put his quest for understanding ahead of, for instance, his quest for wealth, that's a person that's more like me than the average person.

Q: Einstein was a quiet, spiritual man that loved the underdog. Can you relate?

A: Of course. I was the underdog. When you have other kids picking on you all the time, it was either fight or hide. I found it was preferable to fight. So, I eventually became a bar bouncer, when I had access to the gym. I was never into athletics because I couldn't pay the locker fees, the uniform fees. But there was one sport where there were no fees and that was wrestling, and through that I gained access to the weight room.

Q: Do you feel others are intimidated by your intelligence?

A: No, because I don't try to intimidate people. My IQ doesn't get mentioned. I'm a normal person in many ways myself, so there's no reason to turn it in an abnormal direction, unless I have to. In many ways I'm just like anybody else.

Q: Any areas you do not feel confident intellectually?

A: No. There's no art or science which I can be considered incompetent.

Q: What are your other talents?

A: One thing a high IQ is good for is that I have a good array of talents. I can draw, write music, play musical instruments. (He loves classical music and Hendrix.) I can write poetry and literature. I can do pretty much what I want to.

Q: Do you have a favorite author?

A: Tom Wolfe. He was my workout partner and personal friend of mine in Southampton for awhile. As far as great novelists of all time, the usual. Dickens. Hemingway. Never cared much for Faulkner, but I did like Steinbeck.

Q: Do you associate with other "smart" people?

A: I have a pretty smart doctor friend from Southampton – Dr. Joseph DeBellis. He's a cranial facial surgeon, which means he can rebuild an infant with cranial deformities and then he became a cosmetic surgeon, and then a hand surgeon, which is supposedly the most difficult surgeon, working with the muscles and tendons. He's brilliant. As a matter of fact, he and I and another friend are trying to form a software company for medical purposes and data manipulation information management. It will be called Virtual LogistiX.

Q: Is there a field you would have liked to go into?

A: I took an aptitude test once when I was in high school that said I should be a research biologist.

Q: Any regrets?

A: No, because I'm just as good a philosopher and mathematician.

Q: What is your next goal?

A: I am starting "The Mega Foundation," a non-profit organization which helps gifted children have goals that fill their potential.

Q: You are writing a book about the solving mysteries of the universe?

A: Yes. It is called Design for a Universe. It is a takeoff from W. Ross Ashby's Design for a Brain, which was a textbook on cybernetics. It made quite a stir a few years back. Cybernetics is the science of control and communication. Design for the Universe will describe the universe as a self-controlled and self-communicating system. The theory that underlies all this is called the CTMU for Cognitive Theoretic Model of the Universe: How to define the universe and how to describe the universe in a completely self-contained way. So, if you don't have to appeal to any outside agency, everything that the universe needs to exist is contained within the universe. The entire history of science and philosophy has been moving towards a self-contained explanation of everything.

Q: Is it almost finished?

A: The theory is a done deal. Next, I need to find a publisher. The hard part about writing a book like this is taking a lot of mathematics and advanced logic and trying to put it into layman's terms. I want to publish it, by 2001, the first full year of the new millennium. This whole millennium awakening, this whole new understanding of our souls and the reality that we share with each other – that's what the millennium is about and that's what this book is about, so I would like it to coincide.

Q: I understand you can prove there is a God and an afterlife. What promoted you to do this in the first place?

A: Wanting to understand the nature of "existence." Which leads you to the question of whether or not there is a God and if so, of what does God consist? I found that it is impossible to affect a self-contained scientific description of the universe without having a concept that would fit a reasonable definition of God. He's described in any number of gospels or holy texts, rather than something that serves in the role of a creator. Every religion has its own creator myth. Christian religion has the book of Genesis, where God created the universe in seven days. What they're meant to do is explain the origin of the universe – cosmogony and origin of consciousness and life and mankind. When you come back to explain origins like that, you find it is impossible to explain the self-contained origins of things without coming to a concept that pretty much has a definition of God. In other words, it's coming at the God concept, not from faith, as most people do, but from pure logic. There's no reason logic and faith should be at odds with each other. Science and faith are really the same thing.

Q: What do you think the world population will be in 100 years?

A: If I had it my way, the population will fall slightly from what it is and stabilize at a more reasonable number. We would be doing something to conserve our natural treasures the earth has left, because the earth can sustain a smaller number of people. But once you push the population above that critical number, then it's less and less with every passing generation, until finally there's nothing left. So, if things work out correctly, the population will be somewhat less than it is now. If things don't work out correctly, we're gonna have some kind of population catastrophe and how many people would survive that eventuality is anybody's guess.

Q: What is your view on genetic engineering?

A: I think it is a very good thing and I think

CHARITY AND TENNIS AT THE CARTIER GRAND SLAM

By Jan Silver

The many volunteers who work for a year to organize the Cartier Grand Slam tennis tournament weekend prayed to the right weather gods and goddesses on rainy Friday last week. Saturday dawned as a super-clear, sunny day and 120 amateur players headed off to 18 private courts and the early elimination rounds of this tournament for the East End chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Tennis-playing press and sponsors of the event met at the East Hampton Indoor/Outdoor Tennis Club for a morning clinic supervised by the weekend's honored guest, Rosie Casals. In case that name doesn't ring an immediate bell for those under 30, Rosie broke into the top singles world rankings in 1965 at age 17. She is also the consummate doubles player, holding 12 Grand Slam doubles titles. Her doubles partnership with Billie Jean King is legendary.

Rosie is a founder of the Women's Tennis Association and is one of the "Original Nine" players who fought to establish equal recognition for women's tennis in the 1970s. She is known for being outspoken on the court when she doesn't think a call is accurate—and things haven't changed. In an exhibition match with partner Michael Gelman (executive producer of Live with Regis...), Rosie let umpire Lloyd Emanuel know that his creative scoring in favor of opponents Anne Easton (tireless ACS volunteer) and EHIT pro Vince Horcasitas wasn't appreciated.

At 52, Rosie is a muscular bundle of energy. Despite an injured ankle, she scrambled to get everything on the court—and so did Gelman, who proved to be a very fast, competent and agile player.

Rosie is also a wise teacher.

"Since you've been serving that way for many years, I'm not even going to attempt to change your serve," she told Seth Paprin of Manhattan Mortgage after observing his low toss that results in a wicked curve serve.

Pros from Hampton Sports Promotion drilled the group on forehand, backhand, volleying, overheads and serves, then split us up into teams to play. WFAN radio sportscaster Ann Liguori and Dan's Papers' Katlean de Monchy were two of my formidable opponents. Luckily, Seth and Joanne "PeeWee" Watson of Goleat tennis wear were on my team. We won most of our games.

Saturday evening, WNBC-TV news anchor Jane Hanson hosted the brief program where Rosie was honored with the Cartier Legend Award. Tournament chair Anne Easton said the American Cancer Society's Southampton office, which offers outreach programs and assistance for families and individuals in crisis on the North and South Forks, is only possible because of the Cartier Grand Slam tennis tournament. (Nancy Chaffee Whitaker and Aaron Daniels founded the tournament with the assistance of Ralph Destino, then chairman of Cartier, in 1992.)

American Cancer Society events planned for next year on the East End are the Ann Liguori Celebrity Golf Classic at Westhampton Country Club on May 21, the Hamptons Concours d'Elegance classic car exhibition and sale on Memorial Day weekend, and the Cartier Grand Slam VIII in September.

There were two unexpected bonuses at this year's Grand Slam. Participants got to tour Harry Neyens' and Jim Kilpatrick's Bridge Gardens Trust, five acres of unique gardens hidden amid the Bridgehampton horse farms. The gardens are open to the public Wednesday and Saturday afternoons from Memorial Day through September ($10 admission goes to maintaining the gardens). And my friend's beau successfully bid on the sole auction item: four days in Paris at the luxe Hotel Inter-Continental via American Airlines. Rosie Casals added tickets for next spring's French Open to the package. Maybe she can find an extra tennis ticket for me and I'll take a charter flight. •

ROSS INSTITUTE PRESENTS

Synergy Dance

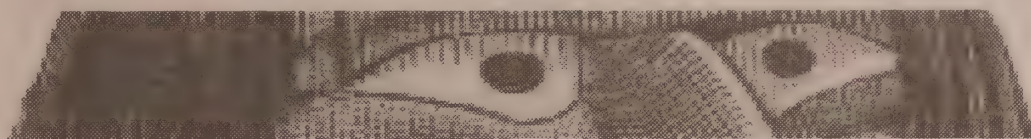

Not the same old workout: Synergy Dance is a unique system combining world dance, Qijong and yoga with the heightened awareness of polarity therapy. The synthesis makes for a deeply healing and rhythmically joyous experience that encompasses stretching, meditation, conditioning, movement exercises and, most importantly, dancing to an array of world musics. Anna de Pagan is a leader in this exciting field and her workshop is not to be missed. No previous dance experience is necessary. For reservations, call 631/907-5163 or email us at events@ross.org.

The Sheltered Island By Sally Flynn

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER # 124 WIPE OUT

Recently I wrote about Shelter Island's housing crisis. And while that is very important, I want to write about something that touches every one of us every day. It's not something we often think about, it seems beneath us to even talk about it. But what the hell, I'm on a roll.

Toilet paper. Where would this country be without it? Especially since Sears doesn't send out those big catalogs anymore. Without toilet paper, this country would be, well... Russia.

Standing in IGA in the paper products section, I became intrigued at the selection of toilet paper available in these United States. I wonder if other nations have the extensive choices we have when it comes to this indispensable wonder of the civilized world.

First, there's color choice. White, peach, blue, pink. What bathroom doesn't have one of these colors in it? Sometimes, through catalogs, you can buy toilet paper with Christmas decorations on it for $5 a roll. I personally want to meet the person who thinks their rear end is worth a $5 paper roll. I draw the limit at $2 myself.

My pal Jean Grenning told me she has a friend with five thousand dollar toilet paper. Why? Because she redecorated her bathroom to match the color of the printed design on a roll of toilet paper. True story.

Then, there's texture. Smooth, stamped with designs, quilted, tufted, single sheets, double sheets. Will 500 double sheets last longer than 1000 single sheets? Do you use more when you have single sheets? My friend Jean is a Charmin person, double sheets and quilted. I'm a Scott girl myself, single sheets, plain faced.

My friend Jay in the city told me he bought a case of 1200 single sheet rolls; he thought he was getting a bargain. But the sheets were extremely thin. How thin were they? Jay said if the paper was any thinner, it would be spray. He had to use half a roll to accomplish anything.

Scented or Unscented? I don't know about anyone else, but when I've have a hard day, I always remind myself to sit up and smell the paper. Life's too short for cheap wine or rough toilet paper.

One of the truist tests of intimacy is if you can call for that person to get you a roll when you're stranded. Those anxious moments as you wait for the arrival of the roll... In anticipation you take off the old roll and the spring loaded spindle shoots across the bathroom floor where you can't reach it from your current position.

Then of course, you have to start the paper right. If you start a roll wrong it shreds in a circular spiral fashion. You have to find the very very end and unroll it until it gradually widens to span the roll. You have to fix it because the person after you will know you screwed it up.

Under or Over? One of the many battlegrounds in any healthy marriage is how to mount the paper, under the spindle or over the spindle. Over of course, is the correct way because if you mount it under, you can't do that neat little snap off right along the perforated edges.

In this world of consultants and trainers for everything, why isn't there an Bottom Utilities Trainor to help you choose the right TP? "Joe Smith, B.U.T." - can't you just see that on a business card? With the myriad of important decisions in corporate America, the decision of toilet paper could finally be removed.

A B.U.T. consultant could help choose politically correct toilet paper. Made from naturally felled, free range trees. No antibiotics or preservatives. Toilet paper that makes a statement. A company that uses natural toilet paper is a company that cares about people from the bottom up. It could be their slogan.

When I use toilet paper today, and I am proud to say I use it every day, I sometimes pause and think of my ancestors. Imagine being forced to use leaves and be forced to do the necessary outdoors...like an animal... How wretched our lives were before the advent of this unsung harbinger of civilized man.

So the next time you're choosing toilet paper, stop and appreciate the trees, the perfumes, the colors, the artistry, the labor involved, the fancy packaging of toilet paper. All this effort, for a part of you you've never seen. Gives you something to think about.

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

All my life I've heard the term "moonlighting" and thought of only one meaning. Moonlighting is when someone has a job outside of their normal nine-to-five. As of this week I've learned a new meaning and I must say I like this one better. Moonlighting is fishing by the light of the moon. With the season winding down I enter into fishing mode. It's already started. With the light of this last harvest moon, I headed out to the fishing grounds at about eleven p.m. A friend came by the house to pick me up. We stopped by the seven eleven for ice and off we went. The wind was up and there was a partial cloud cover. We were doubtful that the conditions would let us get out but luck was with us. The wind settled down. The clouds rolled away and we made it to a favored spot without trouble.

There was one other boat out. We had a little competition but we managed to stay out of each other's way. We both had our running lights in order and the moon made it easy to spot obstacles. We were home by three a.m.

There are a lot of rules about fishing. Striped bass must be over twenty-eight inches long and you are only allowed to keep one bass per angler. Blue fish have fewer restrictions. I'm always surprised when people tell me they hate blue fish. Worse still is when they make the statement they hate fish in general. They sometimes can tolerate canned tuna but it has little resemblance to a "real" fish. After all it comes out of a can and has been severely overcooked.

Even fish-eaters who say they hate bluefish seem to like it smoked. My smoker has been active these last few days. My siblings came to visit this past weekend and I think they consumed about five pounds of smoked bluefish. I'm working on another batch at the moment.

The night of the full moon was a great night for fishing. Our first fish was a twenty-eight inch striped bass. We threw it back. We offered our first good fish up to the fishing God. It is good etiquette to give some fish back to the sea. It leaves more to catch again. The object is not to get as much fish as possible. It is about the sport and having fun. We caught a few undersized fish and they went back in the water as soon as we got them up to the boat. We came in with two blue fish and two striped bass. The bass were twenty nine inches and thirty-three inches long. After a summer of eating in restaurants, I find I have to stay home so I can process my catch.

Obviously I'm a little obsessed with fishing. I find most people who like to fish are a little obsessed with it.

I went to a party the other night and started telling fishing stories. My moonlighting story was the topic. I went out a second time this week and caught nothing but was still willing to tell the tale.

One girlfriend was fascinated. She asked the "captain's" name. I told her. She had tons of questions about him. I said he's married. He's one of my oldest friends. He taught me to surf cast as a teenager. He loves to fish. We are both obsessive about fishing.

She painted a picture in her mind of a rugged guy, a moonlit night and in her mind it was all about romance. I said to forget the romance part. For me it was about the wind direction, salt spray and fish guts. Even with the difference in our viewpoint, I can't wait to go back for more. Sometimes a fish is just a fish!

WIN $5000

FOR YOUR FAVORITE CHARITY, and get recognition on the label for you, by designing the winning wine label for our forthcoming Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon!

Dress My Lady Contest Rules

What you have to do.
We have a beautiful Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon aging gracefully at our vineyard, waiting for her release in the spring of 2001. She is a complicated, sophisticated redhead who defies being labeled. Your challenge is to design the label that fits her. Captures her mood, her essence. Give her a name, give her a look, give her life!

When do you have to do it.
Our Dress My Lady Contest will run during the 2000 year harvest season and will officially close at 12:00 midnight on October 31, 2000. All entries must be received no later than midnight of that date. We will announce the winner, thankfully, on Thanksgiving Day, 2000!

How do you do it.
Create the graphics for the label. Use any medium you wish. We will accept entries that have been designed on a napkin, on a sheet of handmade paper, even on a computer. What we are looking for, ultimately, is style, class, and originality. All entries must be delivered to our advertising agency, Friedman, Ellis, Nielsen & Rogan at 225 Wireless Boulevard, Hauppauge, New York 11788.

Who you have to impress.
We are creating a three-judge panel who will review all of the entries. The decision of the judges is final and is based on creativity and appropriateness.

What you get when you win.
We will adapt your winning design to fit our bottle. Then, we will feature your name and background, along with the rationale you used to create it on a special back label that will be affixed to every bottle of our 2000 Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon. In addition, we will contribute $5,000 in your name to the charity of your choice (see restrictions below).

Here are the legal requirements.

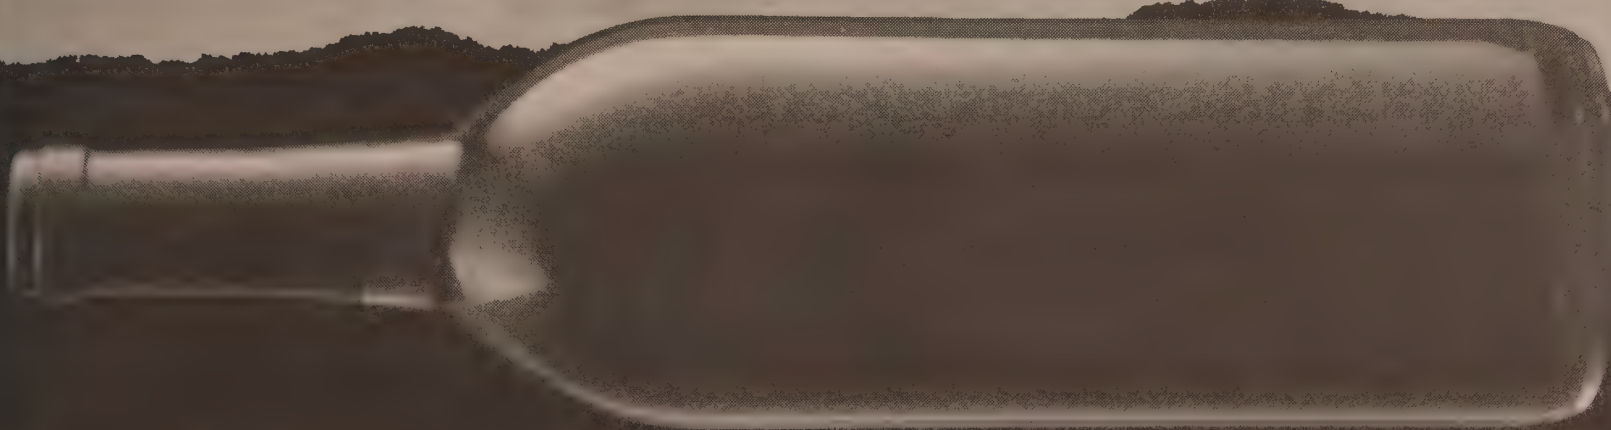

1. No purchase necessary for entry in the contest. You must be 21 years old or older to enter.
2. All submissions must be original designs and not infringe on any third party.
3. Upon receipt, all submissions become the sole property of Galluccio Estate Vineyards, LLC (or its assignee) including but not limited to any and all copyright and trademark rights.
4. Charities eligible to receive the above-described donation shall be limited to entities recognized under Internal Revenue Code §501(c)(3) and the corresponding IRS regulations.
5. Employees or their families of Galluccio Estate Vineyards, LLC, its advertising agency, contest judges, vendors, retailers or distributors of Galluccio Estate Vineyards, or consultants are not eligible.
6. All submissions must be received by mail or hand delivery at the offices of Friedman, Ellis, Nielsen & Rogan at 225 Wireless Boulevard, Hauppauge, New York 11788 by midnight, October 31, 2000. Notice of award will be November 23, 2000. Information regarding the winning entry may be received by either calling the advertising agency (631.231.1431) or by including a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your entry. Be sure to include your name, address, and a daytime phone number with your entry.
7. You may be required to sign an affidavit of eligibility and releases prior to having the prize awarded to the charity of your choice.

*M*y Rose is delightfully enticing.
Whether at home chilling by the pool,
or on your arm at the opera,
she exhibits the kind of rare qualities that have discerning suitors the world over draping her supple neck in gold.
This coming spring my lady will make her debut,
a coming out party for a most notable bloom...
Tell me how to best dress my Rose.

DRESS MY LADY.

Design the label for my Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon.

Next Spring we will release our millennium vintage Rosé of Cabernet Sauvignon. Help us celebrate by participating in the "Dress My Lady" label design contest. You can win $5,000 for your favorite charity, and also get recognized for your effort right on the wine bottle. See the column to the left for complete contest details.

years ago in dan's papers

TWENTY YEARS AGO
"Shipping Out Celebrities"
 September 19, 1980

It wasn't too many years ago that the Hamptons were a peaceful, quiet resort. Oh, we had our high society in Southampton and we had our painters in The Springs but in general they pretty much kept to themselves and didn't bother anyone.

Around five years ago, however, the Hamptons began to be considered one of the "In" resorts in the world. Perhaps it was the decline of the dollar against world currencies. Whatever the reason, all of a sudden the famous and near famous, the seen and out-to-be-seen people all started coming to the Hamptons for the summer rather than the South of France or Cape Cod or wherever else they used to go.

I suppose that for most local people in this area, the presence of a bunch of celebrities was a good thing. If they were impressed with celebrities they could go out to parties celebrity watching, and if they weren't impressed they could ignore them. They could ignore them but still feel flattered that the celebrities had chosen their hometown to settle in for the warmer months of the year.

As for me, however, I've about had it up to here. I publish this newspaper, and, like it or not, I have something of an obligation to report on, take pictures of, and talk to celebrities when they show up at our various events. For example, in covering the annual "Blessing of the Fleet" in Montauk this spring, which is a ceremony to bless the various fishing and charter boats that has been going on for as long as anybody can remember, it was kind of hard not to report on the fact that model Cheryl Tiegs was out there on the dock. It was just one of those things.

Now, I'm kind of excited about celebrities, perhaps as much as anybody, and so at first I took pictures of Cheryl and I talked to Betty Friedan, and I reported on George Plimpton with the same kind of enthusiasm as anything else.

The thing is, though, that in the whole five years that this has been going on now, it has always been the same damn celebrities. We have a hard core of perhaps thirty celebrities out here that have been coming back year after year after year after year after year, and I'm telling you it is beginning to get to me.

For example, last year at an Elaine Benson Gallery opening I found myself, once again, taking a picture of Betty Friedan for the Style section of this newspaper. That may be fine for the tourists who pick up my newspaper for the very first time, but it is not all right with me. I've been taking the same damn picture of Betty Friedan for the last five YEARS. I found myself irritated about this, finally, and it emboldened me.

"Ms. Friedan," I said, trying to keep my voice from cracking, "I'm tired of putting pictures of you in my newspaper every year. This is going to be my last one."

And I've boycotted taking pictures of Ms. Friedan ever since. However, other photographers who work for this newspaper have taken pictures of her and she STILL winds up on the Style page of the newspaper.

I'm tired of these same old faces. What I propose is that we find some other "In" resort which has a whole other group of celebrities, and we swap. It would be like Sister Cities.

We'd each wait until right after Memorial Day Weekend next year when we could Once again confirm that we have been inundated with the same group of old, worn celebrities and then we could get some big railroad car, herd together George Plimpton, Cheryl Tiegs, Edward Albee, Dick Cavett, Betty Friedan, Lauren Bacall, Peter Maas, Craig Claiborne and everybody else, wrestle them aboard and send them off to our sister resort somewhere over the horizon. In exchange perhaps we could receive Johnny Carson, Farrah Fawcett, David Brinkley, Hugh Hefner, George Balanchine and Loni Anderson. We could keep them a year and then ship them off for somebody else.

I know it is hard being a celebrity. Once you do something special everybody is always pointing you out, photographing you and making a big fuss over you. But believe me, it is also hard being a newspaper publisher in a celebrity resort. Especially when the same damn celebrities keep showing up over and over and over again.

it's inevitable as well. I was recently corresponding with a gentleman named West in a company called Geron on the West Coast. Dolly, the cloned sheep had a problem. She aged so rapidly because the chromosomes were unraveling. Dr. West figured out this premature aging was probably caused by the matter of introduction of genetic material into the cell. So, he modified the procedure and produced two twin baby calves. As it turns out, he uses an enzyme, which inhibits and amplifies, and they're aging "less" rapidly than usual. From what I had heard; with this research, it is possible to take an old mouse that is almost dead from old age and reconstitute it to a youthful stage by unraveling up the ends of its chromosomes again to prevent genetic errors from propagating through its cells. If you do that, of course, you restore the chromosomes to a pristine state, then the chromosomes will properly regulate cell genetics and won't have this age related breakdown. It seems to me that if they can do this with mice, they should be able to do that with people as well. So, we're gonna have a reasonable shot at immortality in the approximate future, and I think we're going to have to evolve a whole new set of ethics to deal with. You can't keep on producing people at the rate we're producing them if at some point people are going to qualify to live forever. Of course, nobody's going to live forever, because it can be demonstrated using actuary of science that the maximum life span of a human being will be approximately 600 years because there's death by accident to consider.

Q: Do you feel you have a lot of power . . . inside?

A: Yes, but it has to be recognized by others. Life is full of these peculiar inversions. Sometimes those with the most to offer are given the poorest chances to really deliver. On the other hand, often times, the poorest specimens of moral and intellectual integrity are given more opportunities than others to louse up the world and they do so, with great regularity.

Q: Do you have a sense of humor?

A: You can't work in a bar for twenty five years and not have a sense of humor.

Q: Okay. The last question, the big question: What came first, the chicken or the egg?

A: Well. The egg. It's definitely the egg. Because genetic evidence indicates that chickens are all from egg laying animals, therefore the first chicken must have been enclosed in an egg that was laid by one of their precursors, by the precursor of the chicken, the precursor of the chicken laid an egg from which a chicken hatched. That's the way it must have occurred. There is no other way it could have occurred, unless of course, somebody integrated the first chicken from a test tube.

We took our last bites of ice cream almost at the same time and got up to leave the diner, heading out into the pouring rain. The time went by so quickly; I wished I could have asked 101 more questions about extraterrestrial life, politics, science, and so on and so on. But, instead, I could only watch Chris Langan walk through the down-pour, back to his tiny house. His words repeated in my mind, "I'd like to make the world a better place." But, I think what still haunts me is when he said, "The kind of work I do is of such a nature that if "I" don't do it, it may well be that nobody else will be able to do it."

A trip for two on United Airlines to the Wimbledon Tennis Championships next summer highlighted the fundraising at Summer Splash 2000. The "Auction Of Priceless Temptations" — as the organizers billed the silent auction, took place on Sunday evening under the stars at the Farmhouse Restaurant in East Hampton. The benefit this year was by invitation only, held by proprietors of the Farmhouse, Fred and Susan Lieberman. Guild Hall of East Hampton and the Tess Ryan Fund were the beneficiaries and many local merchants donated merchandise and gift certificates in addition to tickets to the Grammy's, an Alaskan fishing vacation and a deep sea fishing excursion to Cuba. Three hundred and fifty guests danced and partied to two Raggaie bands as they feasted on Farmhouse chef Fredric Kieffer's country barbecue buffet.

"Sag HarborFest 2000"

A weekend celebration of our Maritime History was held over the weekend. Hosted by the Sag Harbor Chamber of Commerce, booths were set up at the foot of the Long Wharf Bridge and local restaurants and wineries had samples for everyone. The classic boat festival where wooden beauties set sail was a favorite event as was The Whaleboat Races. After the last oar hit the water and the last chord from the L.I. Banjo Society was strummed, the festival came to a rousing conclusion with the clam shucking contest. Congratulations to all the winners. Everyone had a whale of a time.

"Before Rita Hayworth"

A cocktail reception to celebrate the upcoming Rita Hayworth Gala was held last week at Van Cleef and Arpels on Fifth Avenue in New York City. This kicks off the party season in New York, and the guests used the occasion to don their new Fall outfits. The Gala, which takes place on October 11 at the Waldorf Astoria, is one of the premier social occasions of the season. Princess Yasmin Aga Khan established the Gala in memory of her mother, Rita Hayworth, who suffered from Alzheimer's disease for many years before her death. The Gala is to raise funds for Alzheimer's research.

"Summer: Game, Set, Match"

The final event of the Summer in the Hamptons, and one with great fun, is the Cartier Grand Slam, a tennis weekend, to benefit the American Cancer Society. Most of us know that quite a few people in the Hamptons tend to be a little competitive, and this tournament does bring out the best or worst in them. But a little aggressiveness on the court is not a bad thing especially when it is all for such an important cause. The weekend began on Friday with a get together at the Meadow Club to get court assignments and pick up the much anticipated and never disappointing gift bag. Then Saturday morning began the matches at various home courts around the Hamptons. Following the matches was lunch at East Hampton Tennis Club where numerous players were complaining how their partners had cost them points. At 1pm there was an exhibition match featuring tennis legend Rosie Casals, who incidentally tried in the Sponsors Clinic to change my legendary bad serve, a valiant but fruitless effort, I admit. The exhibition had Rosie paired with Michael Gelman, the "Live with Regis and Who??" exec producer, against Anne Easton, Tournament Chair and a club pro. Gelman looked lean and mean, especially at the net. The afternoon was more tennis as would be the case throughout Sunday. The evening party was a special treat because it was held at Bridge Gardens, a Hamptons treasure designed by Harry Neyens and Jim Kilpatrick. The grounds are five acres of garden fantasy and I heard that when people sit in the garden house and the Hamptons trains chugs by, it looks like the train is running across the hedges. The party featured a Cartier Lifetime award presentation to Rosie Casals who joins other legends including Virginia Wade and Bill Talbert as recipients.

Our favorite weekday anchor Jane Hanson served as MC. Ralph Destino Chairman Emeritus of Cartier and others told stories about cancer that left people teary eyed. Then came the raffle and if you remember, which you don't, I was one of the winners last year. I stood near the podium to take pictures and I guess it looked like I was expecting a gift. Well it happened again, and I was one of the raffle winners. No, it wasn't a set up, just dumb luck and buying several raffle tickets.

This year, the event was extra special to me because I lost a loved one to cancer. I found that so many participants had similar stories and we all hope that in the near future, we can talk about the bad old days when cancer struck relatives and friends because we successfully struck it down with a cure.

Shop 'til You Drop ... With Maria Tennariello

Now that the kids are back to school, mom's can do some serious shopping. Speaking of moms, my mom has come for a ten day visit in two weeks and we are planning lots of shopping. Hey, where do you think I got it from?

In Southampton on Jobs Lane there is a little shop of pleasures and treasures. Judith Anne's has incredible merchandise like plush toys, outdoor, baby and toddler toys, arts and crafts, music, books, dolls and doll accessories like clothing and furniture, cars, trucks and ride-ons. If you are getting ready for Halloween, Judith Anne's has lots of children's costumes such as brides, Cinderella, Dracula, the Grim Reaper, Knights and much more. Love this store!

At the Fountain Circle on Jobs Lane look for Claire Murray Lifestyles. Her home accessory collection will change the look of your home in no time. Her collection includes hand-hooked rugs, woven throws, kitchen textiles, needle art kits, wearable arts and lots of unique home accessories.

On Main Street in Southampton at the Antique Rug Galleria they are featuring an eclectic array of room-size carpets and small collector pieces of Oriental and European weaves. Also, they are offering expert services in hand cleaning, restoration and appraisals, along with custom size carpets. Call them for a free home consultation at 287-4877.

Hey, one of my favorites, Suffolk Designer Lighting on County Road 39A (near the Omni) has a beautiful light gallery and architectural lighting that everyone should see. Also, lots of home furnishing and accessories at affordable prices.

A new shop that I happened to come upon is Bitter Sweet Interiors on Main Street in Bridgehampton. From So Ho to Bridgehampton, Bitter Sweet offers many antique furnishings and accessories from England, France, Central America and Asia, they are known for their custom upholstery with lead time ranging from four to eight weeks. Lois the owner at Bitter Sweet Interiors invites you to an End of Summer sale offering discounts on floor merchandise and placed orders.

Loom Italia USA on Main Street in Bridgehampton offers the designs and quality of century old looms and handcrafted materials faithfully recreating classic and contemporary designs for indoor and outdoor furnishings, such as gardens and terraces, bedrooms, dining rooms and living rooms.

Sag Harbor, my favorite little charming town has wonderful shops for different lifestyles. The Headley Studio on Madison Street offers whimsical and cleverly crafted merchandise that will add pizzazz and style to your home. This shop has been in business for fifteen years and every year it gets better and better. Look for cookbooks, decorative hardware, bath and kitchen accessories, music and video, ornaments and collectibles, rugs and floor coverings, pottery, baby gifts, baby and children's footwear, bar accessories, books and bookends, candles and candlesticks, and tabletop accents to name just a few. This is a must-see shop, trust me on this one. Stop in and say hi to Steve and tell him that I sent you!

The Shop At The American Hotel on Main Street in Sag Harbor offers handcrafted in Switzerland, the finest hard woods, fitted with brass inlay and exquisitely furnished in exotic veneers, humidors that feature the patented Davidoff internal self-regulator to guarantee a constant relative humidity of 70 to 72%. Whew... They feature the entire line of Davidoff humidors, fine accessories and premium cigars.

For bed and bath linens with style stop in at the Carriage House Antiques antique furnishings and linens and accessories. There are classic and luxurious antiques and fine linens by Ann Gish, Anichini, Bellino, Bellora and more.

Until next week, Ciao and Happy Fall Shopping!

LET THE SEARCH BEGIN

With the Olympics now in full swing, most of us have found ourselves once again completely engrossed in the games. However, this year something is different. The great time difference between the United States and Australia creates a tough dilemma for many fans. Should I listen to the most current results or do I want to wait till tomorrow night and be surprised by the taped competitions? The decision is yours, but if you do choose immediate results and live footage, there is a wealth of websites offering these features. Check out the sites listed below for a variety of sites pertaining to the Olympics.

OFFICIAL SITES:

www.olympics.com- The official site of the Sydney 2000 Olympic Games, this site is a must-see. This easily navigated site covers every sport, every athlete, and every country's performance in the Olympics. Keep an eye on the medal standings to see if the USA remains on top. Click on the live cam view of the Darling Harbor for a view of the action in Sydney. Make Olympics.com your first stop for all of your online Olympic needs.

www.usoc.org- For a more nationalistic view of the Olympics, check out this official site of the U.S. Olympic team. Learn about the history of the Olympics and read all about the athletes listed in the Hall of Fame. Support Olympic athletes by donating online and shopping for merchandise. Don't forget to sign up for your free email account and earn a penny for the U.S. team every time you send a message!

NOT-SO OFFICIAL SITES:

http://www.upenn.edu/museum/Olympics/olympicintro.html- Have the Olympics lost its true spirit and gone downhill since Athens? According to this site, not really. For instance, did you know that cheating and bribery dates back to the Greek Olympics? Read up on the history of the Greek Games and find out "the Real Story of the Ancient Olympic Games."

www.silly2000.com- More interested in the sillier side of the games? This satirical website meets its claim of "keeping you sane during the games" by providing entertainment such as a game where you bet on which athlete takes the most steroids. Not to be taken seriously, read the news stories for humorous twists on Olympic stories.

www.goldmedal.com- A sports management company, goldmedal.com provides interesting profiles on Olympic athletes. Read about why Michael Johnson has decided not to run in the 200m races this year or about Moceanu Solid's experiences this summer at the US Classic. For a different perspective on the lives of many Olympic athletes, click on goldmedal.com.

NEWS COVERAGE:

www.nbcolympics.com- Armed with the exclusive rights to televise the games, NBC's website boasts "up-to-the-minute results, commentary, and images" direct from the Olympics. Do not miss the "athlete's voice" section of the site where athletes express their sentiments about their performance and the experience of being in Sydney. For straight coverage and beautiful photographs, nbcolympics.com fits the bill.

www.wemedia.com- The official webcaster of the 2000 Paralympics, check this site out for its exclusive coverage of the elite competition for athletes with disabilities. Well-written profiles of athletes and current coverage of the trials make this site comprehensive and interesting.

LOOKING AHEAD:

http://www.slc2002.org- Curious about the 2002 Winter Olympics? Check out this official site for a preview of the Salt Lake City Olympics. Schedules, ticket information, venue descriptions, and an accommodation guide will encourage you to make plans to see the Olympics live. Be ahead of the games by purchasing Salt Lake 2002 apparel now!

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"BENEATH THE SURFACE" AT GAYLE WILLSON

The theme of Gayle Willson's show, "Beneath the Surface," comes at a relevant time considering the current film with a similar title, What Lies Beneath, starring Harrison Ford. However, unlike the movie (which the Village Voice called "alternately drowsily dull") the art is anything but boring.

One reason is the craftsmanship involved; another is the common "thread" which connects the pieces – a play on words that is at once literal and figurative – meaning the uniform use of real thread/lines as material/technique. Much of the art also conjures up objects which are ancient/primitive.

Edith De Chiara's pieces, some aptly titled "Linescape," feature thread; pencil, mixed media and encaustic on canvas. The thread configurations are abstract, somewhat like Jennifer Cross' seascapes, evoking a similar moody and mysterious atmosphere. The artist's earth tones are also simultaneously subtle and beautiful, recalling any number of references like ancient cave markings.

Works by Fran Kaufman continue the thread idea, as scrolls of paper are tied together and then arranged vertically down a piece of material ("Bandolier"). Such art reminds one of a primitive religious item. Ms. Kauman proves she has both a sense of direction and style as well as humor in her "Bad Hair Day" where small paper streamers are hung horizontally along a paper strip.

While Christine Graf's mixed media pieces (featuring graphite and encaustic collage) do not possess literal threads, her design is predicated on box-like shapes which are executed by line demarcations ("Lamentation"). The monochromatic hues, like Ms. De Chiara's earth tones, summon ancient tablets/stones despite the use of text (from magazines perhaps) embedded in the boxes.

Other works on display produce subtle patterns of threads/lines, including Margaret Dorfman's exquisite handmade parchment bowls created from vegetable/fruit skins. Here the lines are indigenous to the vegetable skin itself. A scarf by Carole Waller also employs lines in its design with stunning results.

The current exhibit at Southampton's Gayle Willson Gallery will be on view

Work by Edith De Chiara

until Oct. 2.

HONORING THE ARTIST: Richard Gibbs

Looking through the work of artist Richard Gibbs, one had the sense of the art of Edward Hopper: individuals, whether solitary or in groups, preoccupied with an interior solitude.

The artist said, "Well, Hopper is one of my favorite artists. I just like the solitude of things. A deliveryman walking along the street; a guy cleaning up an apartment with a mop. Hopper captured this solitude and his work has always appealed to me."

Richard Gibbs might be more accurately titled Dr. Gibbs. Formerly a dermatologist, he has been a full time artist for some years now, though he started painting seriously more than three decades ago, while still in practice. And he relates his discipline in science as having a definite influence on his art. The study of color and form are not unrelated to the study of the body. The skin, after all, is a sort of canvas.

In discussing why he favors representational art, Dr. Gibbs also ventured a very plausible theory about those who work at a full-time job and who are also artists. "Representational art is straightforward. Abstract art is more experimental, theoretical. People who have full-time jobs have less time to experiment. And they are formed by doing things in, I guess you could say, the real world, every day, so they are more likely to see things as they present themselves. And certainly most scientists paint realistically; it's their nature."

Dr. Gibbs focuses on people: bathers at the shore; riders on a train, one asleep, the other affixing makeup; girls in a play yard; people waiting at an airport; shoppers at a produce store; men playing tennis; two lifeguards on duty. So many of his subjects, whether interacting with each other or not, seem to be staring off into a distance that is as much interior as exterior. In one painting a group of schoolgirls with the sort of hats that one might see on the children's character Madeline, look downward over a railing by a pond, their backs to the viewer, their camaraderie stilled by a moment of simple discovery.

"Simple" is a word Dr. Gibbs happily applies to himself. "I like things simple and plain." This is how he keeps his skies, he says, so they do not dominate his subjects. "I am careful about making skies too active."

The artist said he seeks his subjects "by carrying a camera around if I see an intriguing image. Even if the photograph is blurred it doesn't matter. When I was practicing I'd walk around in New York –

there would always be one image that would strike me."

Dr. Gibbs began studying at the Arts Student League in 1965. He also studied at the School of Visual Arts and the National Academy of Design. He said he is especially indebted to the tutelage of Burton Silverman, whom he studied with from 1976-1990.

He is now a teacher of art himself, in Juno Beach Florida.

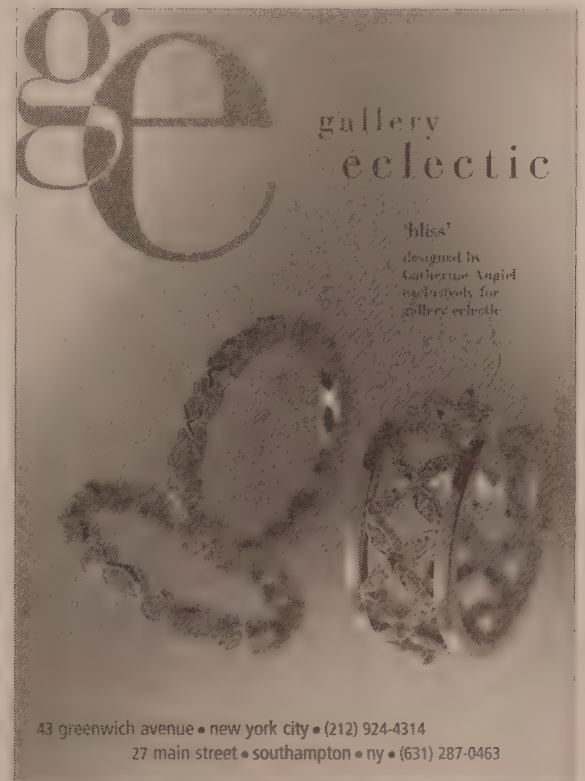

He stresses "The values must be right" – meaning how the colors of a painting relate to each other. "A man on a white beach looks darker the beach," he said.

He spoke a little about how he often continues to work on a painting. "The paintings I keep in my house I often change years later. There was a painting I sold to Chemical Bank. I had two paintings of this scene: a man with his son in a field; the son was sitting on the father's knee. The painting I kept of this I kept working on, and with time it came to look very different than the one I had sold. I heard a story once about an impressionist, Monet I think, who was making changes in his canvases that were already hung for a show.

In Dr. Gibbs' painting on this issue's cover, several people seem about to launch a sailboat into the water. As in many of the artist's works, they look outward, away from the viewer, each poised in a task. People involved in a task are what Dr. Gibbs especially likes to capture, he said – which perhaps is no more or less than an inner and outer reflection of what all artists do, who, if not at a task, are searching for the next task that will embrace all their energies.

Take Five 2000 with Jan Silver

The entertainment this weekend is diverse, from the funny to the serious. On the lighter side, comedienne Kate Clinton brings her one-woman show to Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Saturday evening. Cabaret star Billy Stritch sings at Bay Street Theatre on Saturday, and Seven Nations, a Celtic rock band with bagpipes, plays the Performing Arts Center on Friday. Comedic singer/writer Kinky Friedman will be at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday, and Greenport will be invaded by pirates during the Maritime Festival on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

On the more serious side, Rena Kornreich Gelissen, an Auschwitz survivor, will speak at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons on Friday; Anne Roiphe's first play will be read by Anne Bancroft at the Jewish Center on Saturday; and a new exhibition, "The Perpetual Well: Contemporary Art from the Jewish Museum Collection" opens at Southampton's Parrish Art Museum on Saturday. The Southampton Historical Museum offers a tour of a Main St. house originally built in 1648 (see Special Events below). For details on all of the above, read on:

THEATER

Comedienne Kate Clinton will perform her one-woman show Y2K8.comedy on Saturday at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. She skewers local and international news, sports, politics, art, science, and more in her stand-up routines. Showtime is 8:30 p.m. and tickets ($25-$45) are reserved by calling the box office at (631) 288-1500.

A reading of novelist Anne Roiphe's first play, The Heidegger Triangle, featuring actress Anne Bancroft, can be heard at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons on Saturday at 8 p.m. It is the dramatic love story of German philosophers Hannah Arendt and Martin Heidegger. He became a Nazi and she, although Jewish, stayed loyal to him. There is a discussion with the author, director and actors following the reading (there is no admission charge).

MUSIC

Seven Nations, a pop/rock band that includes bagpipes and violin in its music, will be at Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Friday at 8:30 p.m. Tickets ($25, $35) can be reserved at the box office; call (631) 288-1500.

Grammy Award-winning composer/arranger/singer Billy Stritch performs at Bay Street Theatre, Sag Harbor, on Saturday at 7 p.m. He is also a popular Manhattan cabaret entertainer. For tickets to the show ($32), call the Bay Street box office at (631) 725-9500.

The Feigin Duo (pianist and violinist) will give a concert at the Montauk Library on Sunday at 5:30 p.m.

This weekend, the musical action at local clubs and restaurants includes comedic songwriter and mystery novelist Kinky Friedman at Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse on Saturday, 8 p.m. (call 631-267-3117 for tickets). In Bridgehampton, there's mellow jazz on Friday evening at Kiplings, hotter bands Thursday through Saturday at The Wild Rose, and dance music at Bridges on weekends (plus the Sunday gospel brunch). Stefanie Cardinali, Paul Gene and Rick Salter perform swing music at Montauk's Oyster Pond on Friday. Hansom House in Southampton has live performances on weekends.

SPEAKERS

Rena Kornreich Gelissen, an Auschwitz survivor and author of Rena's Promise: A Story of Sisters in Auschwitz will speak at the Jewish Center of the Hamptons, East Hampton, on Friday evening at 8:30 p.m. Her story is being made into a movie. Everyone is welcome at the Jewish Center and there is no admission charge.

The major fall exhibition at the Parrish Art Museum, Southampton, opens on Saturday. "The Perpetual Well: Contemporary Art from the Jewish Museum Collection" includes the work of Annie Leibovitz, Larry Rivers, Robert Wilson and other artists both Jewish and non-Jewish. Norman Kleeblatt, a Jewish Museum curator, will speak about the collection at 5 p.m. and lead a panel discussion with several artists whose work is featured in the exhibit. A reception follows the program (free to Museum members, $7 for guests).

At the bookstores this weekend, EEGO is presenting a poetry reading on Friday, 6 p.m., at Canio's Books, Sag Harbor. On Saturday at Canio's, poets Norbert Krapf (new collection Bittersweet Along the Expressway) and Vince Clemente will read at 6 p.m. At Book Hampton, East Hampton, David Hollander will read from his new novel L.I.E. on Saturday, 5:30 p.m.

SPECIAL EVENTS

This is Greenport's annual Maritime Festival weekend. This year the village will be invaded by pirates on the bad ship Malabar. They are expected at Claudio's docks at 1 p.m. on Saturday and Sunday where they will be wreaking havoc each day until 6 p.m. There are also whaleboat races, kayak rescue demonstrations, a parade and other events planned for the weekend.

The Jonas Bower house, first built at 126 Main Street, Southampton, in 1648 and "renovated" to a grander style in 1708, will be open to the public on Sunday from 4 to 7 p.m. as a benefit for the Southampton Historical Museum. The current owners, Lorraine and Skip Ralph, call it the "1708 House."

There will be a wine and hors d'oeuvres reception during the open-house hours; call (631) 283-2494 for advance tickets ($30) or purchase tickets at the door ($40).

GIRLS EXPOSED TUMMIES ACHE BAD?

Are bare, unladylike, puffed-up navels a threat to morality? Fellow Americans! say, hello! to the new spunky and lint free thrust of pop culture feminism... the current, rampant, undraped exposure of Chic-Slut...the well manicured and highly polished finger pokes into the public's eyes and conservative propriety. BORN TO DRESS AND ACT BAD

Alighting at J.F.K. from my solacing time abroad, my nose was immediately ink stained with headlines of Britney Spears' "shocking" partially unclad appearance on the MTV Video Awards TV show. You may well ask where I've been. I ask! Oui, je demandez! of the shocked among you, where the heck have YOU been? Ms. Spears was wearing a belly shirt, oddly named, since it doesn't cover the belly. My gosh, it revealed her belly button... was it unbuttoned? Madonna (who did not appear on the MTV Award show) unzipped the whole trend of cosmetic, heavily buttered soft Pop Porn. She said, "If I had been there, I'd have worn only a G-string, a feather boa and my boyfriend's diamond ring." She's a new mother... she knows about all those hard working Moms who worked their SUVs down to the axles to make winning cheerleaders of their little girls... Estee Lauder cleansed as-clean-as-a-whistle and doing body moves as down and dirty as those in the outpouring of Little Girl sexuality movies that gained an Oscar for American Beauty and wide-eyed audiences for the FlashDance update, Coyote Ugly and reeking Cheese bits like, The In Crowd, where rich-bitch is added to pubescent, pouty lip requirements.

TEMPESTUOUS MEAN TEENS

There's the rash (yes, like the spotty eruption of inflammatory irritation that causes itchy arousal) of tempty-teen blotches like Boys and Girls and Whatever It Takes. Then, how about the randy-dandy, cheery-cheerleaders, in Bringing It On, reminding us, historically, of the origins of the Bad Good Girl... "The Dallas Cowboy Cheerleaders" (way back then) and the subsequent porn film, Debbie Does Dallas. It's all in fun and therefore, no one would think of interfering with the Everygirl as a real-live pin-up...and bent on bending the point of the push pin. Notice that never is there a thought of "saving" the young damsel. And, as that good girl, Martha Stewart, is fond of saying, "It's a good thing," because I saw the popular movie Saving Grace. WHY A DIFFERENCE FOR MATURE WOMEN?

A British sleeper, coming from behind, as did the Full Monty (or, in that case, I should say...frontally). Saving Grace's exhibition has been expanded to almost 900 theatres. It has caught the unfrilled fancy of the Bad Good Girl audience. Big difference, however, is the attractive lass is older looking... like Margaret Thatcher would have if she had had a transfusion of lively, warm bloodedness and human kindness. The lovely Grace is given patronizing graciousness by Brenda Blethyn, with well-mouthed sincerity that is as genuine as Grace's well known ability as a gardener. Following the foolish accident or, suicide of her well-to-do but, ne'er-do-well husband she is left with nothing but bills and a grand house and property, mortgaged to a fare-thee-well. She girds her pride and loins, gives her bust a lift and digs into her green thumb skills to produce a harvest of Pound notes. With the assistance and small stash of her groundskeeper, Craig Ferguson (who wrote the script with Mark Crowdy) she grows a crop of marijuana... a "Joint Venture" as the film keeps reminding us.

AIRBRUSH RETOUCHING FOR OLDER WOMEN

The producers manage to reduce the glorious seaside town of Cornwall to a typical television sitcom, uncolorful, we've-seen-it-before, two-dimensional no man's land and do the same to Grace. Too, she is surrounded by totally dotty neighbors who look as eccentric as they act and, that's a weak act to follow.

This is no Full Monty or Brassed Off. There is no bitter social commentary...no commentary at all. The sharp tones that British Cinema has been noted for... its connections with reality, have been erased... like undergoing acute cosmetic surgery or cranial liposuction. Worse! Grace is never allowed to be really naughty, at all. Even her dalliance with a French drug lord is insipidly washed down with White wine. For me, the saving grace of the movie is Tcheky Karyo, as the drug king pin and not because he's (pardonez, moi) French. It is his grimy badness that gives us a tender moment whereas, the movie's outdated, Cloroxed white suit - goodness is as bland and starched as Margaret Thatcher's hair and philosophy.

When Grace was good, she was very, very good. If she'd been allowed to be very, very bad she might have been amazing.

silvia lehrer's cooking column

In an area where clams are abundant, lovers of clam chowder, pasta with clam sauce or simply clams on the grill can rejoice with the choices available. Hard-shell clams from the bays along our East Coast are graded and named by their size.

The popular Littlenecks, at about 1 1/2 inches in diameter, are the smallest next to the cherrystones, which are about 2 1/2 inches in diameter. Littlenecks are perfect for cooking pasta with fresh clam sauce. For the pasta I prefer to add well-scrubbed clams in their shell to cook until they open, rather than shucked and chopped clams; so the smaller the better. Cherrystones are perfect for tossing on the grill or adding to chowders. Chowder or quahog clams, about 4-5 inches in diameter, are the choice of many cooks to prepare a fragrant, salty New England type chowder.

All clams must be alive when purchased. Just be sure the shells are tightly closed. Because of their sandy habitat I will scrub clams, one against the other, by dunking them in several changes of cold water until all traces of sand is gone. This is by far, better than purging their sand with cornmeal, allowing their tasty juices to drain away. As with all bivalves rely on your trusted fishmonger to see they are fished from clean waters.

QUAHOG CLAM AND CORN CHOWDER

The meat of the large hard-shell clam, more properly known by its Algonquian Indian name quahog (pronounced co-hog), is definitely chewy and more strongly flavored. This hard-shell clam however gives off a salty fragrance to make a superb chowder.

12 quahog clams
3 cups cold water
2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
2 onions, finely chopped
2 carrots, cut into small dice
2 Yukon Gold potatoes
1 large bay leaf
Coarse (kosher) salt and freshly ground pepper
2 ears fresh corn kernels
1/2 cup skim milk
1/2 cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon fresh thyme leaves
1 tablespoon chopped Parsley

1. Put the clams in a bowl and fill with cold water.

Scrub the clams and rub them, two at a time, one against the other, then place them in a second bowl of cold water. Pour off the sandy water from the first bowl and fill the second bowl with fresh cold water. (I do this right in the kitchen sink.) Repeat two or three times until there are no traces of sand in the water. Put them in a large pot with the water, cover and bring to the edge of a boil. Simmer until the clams open, about 10 minutes. With a slotted spoon transfer them to a large colander over a bowl; do not drain the liquid from the pot. Return the pot with the clam liquid over medium-high heat and reduce to about 4 - 4 1/2 cups. Scoop the meat from the shells, discarding shells. Mince the clams.

2. Meanwhile, heat oil in a 4 or 5 quart saucepan and put in the onions. Sauté for 3-4 minutes, add the carrots and potatoes and sauté 2-3 minutes longer. Add the clam liquid, bay leaf and salt and pepper to taste. Simmer for 8-10 minutes. Add corn kernels and simmer 3-4 minutes longer.

3. Add the milk, cream and minced clams to the broth, stir to mix and simmer gently for 8-10 minutes. Discard bay leaf and stir in the herbs. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary and serve hot. Can be prepared up to one day ahead. Refrigerate in a suitable container; bring to room temperature and reheat gently before serving.

LINGUINE WITH CLAMS MARECHIARE

A fresh way with an Italian classic.

Serves 4

24 little neck clams
1/3 cup extra-virgin olive oil
2-3 cloves garlic, finely chopped
1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper
2-3 plum tomatoes, peeled, seeded and diced
1/3 cup dry white wine
1/3 cup finely chopped flat-leaf Italian parsley
Freshly ground pepper

For the pasta

1 pound linguine
About 1 tablespoon coarse salt for the cooking water
Sprigs of parsley for garnish, optional

1. Put the clams in a bowl and fill with cold water. Scrub the clams by rubbing them, two at a time, against each other and placing them in a second bowl of cold water. Pour off the sandy water from the first bowl and fill the second bowl with fresh cold water. (I do this right in the kitchen sink.) Repeat two or three times until there are no traces of sand in the water.

2. Put the oil in a medium skillet and heat. Add chopped garlic and sauté quickly until garlic is translucent; do not brown. Add hot pepper and stir to mix. Stir in tomatoes and simmer for 2-3 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. Pour in wine, bring to a boil and reduce by half.

3. Meanwhile in a large saucepan bring 4 - 4 1/2 quarts water to a boil, add salt and slip in the pasta. Cook, covered, in vigorously boiling water, separating the strands as necessary. Simmer briskly about 8 minutes. Start tasting after about 7 minutes; pasta should be cooked al dente or toothsome to the bite.

4. Add the clams to the pan with the tomatoes and wine while the pasta is cooking and bring to the edge of a boil. Cover and simmer the sauce until the clams open, about 8-10 minutes. Season with freshly ground pepper to taste. Stir in parsley and taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Drain the pasta and transfer to a warm bowl. Be sure the clams have opened then pour over the sauce. Toss with a large serving spoon and fork. Serve at once on warm plates and divide the clams evenly. Garnish with parsley sprigs, if desired.

CLAMS ON THE GRILL

Clams on the grill are a quick and easy appetizer.

A mesh-type grill accessory over the grate will stabilize the clams while cooking. Serve with grilled French bread slices to sop up their juices.

Serves 4 - 8

1 -2 dozen cherrystone clams, scrubbed clean as above
Grilled French bread slices, drizzled with extra-virgin olive oil

1. Preheat a gas grill to medium-high or until coals are ashen gray. Place well-scrubbed clams on the grill and cook until they open, about 2-3 minutes. Clams have a self-timer as they will open as they are done. With tongs, carefully transfer them to a serving platter garnished with toasted or grilled French bread slices and serve at once.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Named "Best of The Best 1999," and will no doubt take 2000, the Crow's Nest is Montauk's best restaurant. It is also "The Last Restaurant on Long Island," and not many restaurants retain that bragging right either. The Crow's Nest is easy to locate. Just drive through Montauk and it will be on your left. In the parking lot, I noticed families and couples very excited to get inside. It reminded me of the atmosphere at an amusement park. Somehow this place makes you feel young and carefree. At the door, "Billy, The Big Mouth Bass," an animatronic fish, sings "Don't Worry, Be Happy," and there is a replica of a Great White Shark there too.

At the door, I was greeted by Karen Kearns, who introduced me to the owner, Don Torr. I explained to Don how much I am interested in restaurants, and he gave me a tour of the whole facility. Behind the restaurant was a large tent that is used for weddings. The tent is a stone's throw from Lake Montauk. I could only imagine smiling faces and barefoot kids running around as adults relaxed near the shore. I realized that this place was much more than a restaurant/inn, it was an oasis of everything good.

Inside the restaurant, people were very excitedly conversing, and children were afoot. Incredibly, there are several 150 gallon salt-water fish tanks; and one monstrous 1000 gallon tank. Inside the tanks are colorful exotic fish. Separated, in the 1000 gallon tank, is the resident shark and morey eel. The tanks are stunning, and a good way to let kids explore before dinner. After I was seated, my waiter, Dominic, immediately brought me a menu, some warm bread, and pitcher of water. I ordered Oysters Rockefeller - Crow's Nest Style, and some Award Winning Manhattan Clam Chowder. As I sat, I noticed how efficient and professional the staff was. I have never seen a better orchestrated example of teamwork. The appetizer platter was beautifully presented and tasted excellent. For my main course, I ordered the Surf & Turf: one 5oz Brazilian Lobster Tail broiled to perfection, and a 7oz grilled filet mignon. Every bite was ecstasy.

The Crow's Nest

After dinner I got a tour of the kitchen, and the goings on there. The kitchen was extremely neat and tidy. Chef Mike Fuchs gave me the tour and some of his secrets to cooking. "Everything is made fresh on the premises; All soups, sauces and dressings." The lobsters are kept in holding tanks with fresh seawater. The water is re-circulated into the bay.

There is something for everyone at The Crow's Nest. It is the heavyweight champion of restaurants in Montauk. There is a reason that this restaurant has been around for 25 years; Don Torr knows the secret for success.

Cooking tip of the Week: Keep your culinary knives sharpened. Most accidents occur because of dull blades. And don't forget to cast your vote in the Best of the Best Contest 2000!

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Joe is off and running once again, so you get me this week. I had the opportunity recently to look back over the past four and a half years at all the Promotion and Education (P&E) committee has done. When I came on board, Lyle Wells was the chair and founder of this committee. He passed the wand over to Phil and Debbie Schmitt a year or two ago, and they are (as are all members of the committee) wonderful to work with. And we really have accomplished a lot!

Of the many projects we've undertaken, there are two that are my own personal favorites, one of which is the first large project that I coordinated – our website. Long Island Farm Bureau was one of the first two counties in New York Farm Bureau that had their own websites, placing LIFB in the annals of Farm Bureau history. By adding the website to the existing "Overall Connection" promotion campaign (designed to connect the non-farming community to farmers and farming), along with public service announcements, the redesigning of our newsletter and more efficient use of our small advertising budget, LIFB won the American Farm Bureau's (AFB) County Idea Exchange Program. This program was developed to recognize and share "innovative programs and activities that meet the goals of the organization" created by county farm bureaus. There are four categories and only three winners in each category were selected from the entire United States. It was a thrill to win and have our county recognized with others throughout the nation at the AFB National Convention in Charlotte, NC.

My other personal favorite project was one of the most recent – an educational video we produced last winter entitled "Grown on Long Island." So many children (and some adults!) have no idea that food does not magically appear on grocery store shelves. So, we met with local farmer members, fourth grade teachers and Cornell Cooperative Extension staff to gather ideas on how we could show this in an entertaining way while making it easily used by grade school teachers. Originally the brainchild of Howard Johnson, our current president, the video follows the seed to the table, covers Long Island farming history and looks at the diversity of our agriculture. We hired Black Sheep Television, a Westhampton-based video production company, to do the technical work. I sure made a lot of trips to their studio that winter, but owners Jacques and Jan were fantastic to work with and brought a unique perspective to the project. In the end, we had a fun, informative and professionally produced (and possibly award-winning) video, and were able to get it into over 100 schools! It works best with second and fourth grade curriculums, but it was shown successfully to Kindergarteners on up to sixth graders. If you know a teacher, tell him/her to give us a call at 727-3777 – it is free to schools. Others can purchase it by sending us a check for $5 to cover costs.

We have just published a beautiful, brand new farmstand guide! Nanci at Pine Barrens Printing helped out a lot on that, and I'd like to thank her and all the farmstand and u-pick farm owners who participated. That, too, is free to you for the asking!

I have been involved on the planning committee of the Fall Harvest Festival, working with great people like Linda Lynch and Bill Sanok of Cornell Cooperative Extension and Bob Beodeker of Suffolk County Community College's Eastern Campus. It is always a great day – I went to it for years before I had to start working it!

These are just a few examples, but after stepping back and looking at the past four and a half years, I realized exactly just how much the P&E committee has achieved. In case you were wondering why I was looking back at my time here, it is because I am moving on. I will be joining the throngs on the Long Island Distressway, commuting from Riverhead to Huntington every day. My new position is as Account Executive for a well-known and respected public relations firm, where I will be working with some of the best in the business.

While it is indeed time for me to move on, I know that I have made at least a small contribution to a noble cause – helping to preserve our farms and our farmers.

Having lived my whole life on Long Island, I now consider myself "agriculturally enlightened." But the hardest part of leaving this job is leaving the people. The staff – Joe, Rob, Ceil and Becky – well, you couldn't ask for a nicer or more dedicated, supportive and hard-working group of people to work with. They are the greatest, as are the board members and all the farmers I've gotten to know over the years. I will truly miss them all, and thank them so much for the honor of knowing them and of working with them during my time with Farm Bureau.

Toni Munna, Director of PR for Long Island Farm Bureau. Executive Director Joseph Gergela III will return next week.

The Links at Shirley - Your Country Club For A Day.

When Mel Leigh Mindich, a very successful real estate and property developer from Scarsdale bought just over 200 acres of land in Shirley, just off William Floyd Parkway, his intention was to build houses there.

"The land was zoned for one acre lots but at the time that I was ready to begin building there were various potential environmental problems in the area associated with the Brookhaven National Laboratory so it was not the time to proceed with this plan. Now I am a self confessed golf nut and I already owned a small golf course in Connecticut so it was natural for me to look in earnest at the possibilities of building a golf course on the land," Mel explained. "It took about four years to obtain all the necessary permits. The Town of Brookhaven was very helpful and I think they are excited by what we have created here now that we are open for business. The club will be a long term asset to the community in many ways and I hope it will help with the renaissance of the whole Shirley area."

Now, Mel Mindich is not just a lover of golf but he is also an unashamedly hands-on person, "I decided from the very first that I was not going to employ a management company to run the club. All the businesses that I have been involved in over the years seem to lead effortlessly towards golf course management. I am an engineer, builder and developer and, to repeat myself, a golf nut!"

Today Mel concentrates on the Links at Shirley and you can tell as soon as you start talking to him that this is more than just an investment of money. "My wife says that I have a mistress called Shirley," he said with a broad, engaging smile.

One of the major decisions in the project was the choice of the course designer and again as we discussed this, Mel was characteristically blunt in his comments, "I talked with many designers but I knew from the start that I was not going to entrust this to one of the big names. When I first met with Jeff Myers, who has worked with Gary Player on course design and construction, I immediately liked him and that was very important for me because I like to surround myself with people I like, and I also am a firm believer in fostering young talent. This is, increasingly, the world of the young and if you give a young person an opportunity they are more likely to work harder to come up with fresh ideas. Jeff's philosophy of course design meshed with mine, so that was that. I am delighted with what he and his team have created here. I'm not really an ego maniac but it was great to be able to a real part of the process and to have that input facility."

The general contractor for the building of the course was Quality Grass and Services from Florida and the course was completed ahead of time and came in under budget.

The Links at Shirley has a number of features which are not found on most golf course here. As well as the 18 hole championship course which is just over 7,000 yards off the back tees and has a par of 72, there is a 18 hole Par three course which has been built and is maintained to the standard of the main course. This delightful short course measures 2,222 yards and is completely floodlit and as the last tee time is around 11:30 to midnight, this is a course for insomniacs, people who work late or simply people who want to experience the pleasure of playing under floodlights. This is proving very popular and there have even been times when there has been a short wait on the first tee even at 11:30 p.m.

Sean Mulligan is the Director of Golf and has been a PGA professional since 1995. Sean was the head professional at the Marriot Windwatch before taking up his new appointment at Shirley. "This was a wonderful opportunity to develop a new high-class club with all the features of a top country club," he explained, "I came here just after the first seeding and six months before we opened. Guests here really appreciate the way that they are looked after. The course is not over long but it is a real challenge and demands good course management to post a good score. With the way that the tees are arranged, every level of golfer can play here and come in with a real sense of achievement."

Mel picked up these points, "As the grass matures we intend to ease up on the watering so the fairways will dry out naturally and so will the greens so the course will have even more of a true links' feel. This will not be a course where you throw the ball up onto the green and it will stick. The wind also will make the course play differently from day to day or even from morning to afternoon. All the par threes run in different directions which adds to the complexity."

The main clubhouse at the Links at Shirley is almost complete and then the par three course will have the present small club house for itself. The new club house will include a dining room looking out over the course and will serve breakfast, lunch and dinner and will be open to the general public. "One of the main catering companies on the Island, Lovin' Oven Celebrations will be responsible for the catering," Mel explained, "They have a very good reputation for food and service. I expect that we will serve pub food plus and we intend this to be a major part of the total package we offer here."

Another unusual feature of the Links at Shirley is the enormous double ended driving range which can accommodate players on the main course at the clubhouse end and players for the Par three course at the other end. Another feature of the driving range is that the range balls are top quality balls and not the usual 'driving range specials' which often feel like hitting miniature cannonballs.

Mel Mindich is not a man to stand still and reflect for too long on his achievements. Already he has plans for the future. "Next year we will host the Golf Digest Golf School, which is one of the most respected golf schools, and should prove immensely popular." There also are plans for a catering hall here and Mel admits that thoughts of other new golf courses are very much in his mind.

The Links at Shirley is a golf course which is a very welcome addition to the golf facilities on eastern Long Island. Its situation makes it very accessible for golfers traveling to or from the Hamptons or the North Fork and it really is worth the visit because once you have played it you will almost certainly want to come back. The course really does set itself up for all levels of golf skills and you do not have to be a monster hitter to enjoy it or post a respectable score. After your first round you will think of shots you played and how you would approach the hole the next time and so you will be back. The course is in excellent condition and the greens are very true and the ground staff headed by the Course Superintendent, Enrique Matiz have done a remarkable job. The course will stay open throughout the winter unless there is heavy snow.

Mel Mindich deserves the last word, because he has obviously put so much of himself into the course, "This is, without doubt, the most satisfying thing I have ever built and I want golfers in the area to come and really enjoy it. My objective has been to provide Country Club golf and amenities on a daily basis and I believe from the feedback that we are getting that we are meeting this objective. I set high standards and everything at the Links at Shirley will run to my standards so that golfers and visitors will always go away happy with their experience here."

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Did you know...

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among women ages 40-59. It is the leading cancer site among American women and is second only to lung cancer in cancer deaths. During the year 2000, 182,800 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and 40,800 women will die of breast cancer.

The most proven and significant risk factors are being female and getting older. The majority of women with breast cancer have no known significant family history or other known risk factors. Only 5-10% of breast cancers are due to heredity. Most women who are diagnosed with breast cancer survive the disease. If detected early, breast cancer is a curable disease.

Early detection and treatment offer the best chance currently available for surviving breast cancer. The following steps are recommended:

- Annual screening mammography beginning by age 40 and continuing throughout your life.
- Clinical breast examination at least every 3 years beginning at age 20 and annually after age 40.
- Monthly breast self-examination beginning by age 20.

Saks Helps Launch Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Saks Fifth Avenue will once again kick-off National Breast Cancer Awareness Month (October) on September 21, with a nationwide shopping weekend to benefit the Council of Fashion Designers of "American's Fashion Targets Breast Cancer" initiative and local and national breast cancer charities. Last year's event raised over $2 million, and this year the weekend's goal is over $3 million. The event takes place in all of Saks Fifth Avenue's sixty-two stores across the country, as well as in the forty-five OFF 5th outlet stores, saksfifthavenue.com (the company's new e-commerce website), and Folio, the company's mail order catalog.

Saks Fifth Avenue has created a photographic celebration of life by bringing together twenty breast cancer survivors to put a face on this disease. Photos taken by Sandi Fellman will be exhibited in Saks' windows across the country as part of its shopping weekend, September 21-24, to benefit Fashion Targets Breast Cancer.

Jaguar Cars, Continental Airlines and Donna Karan Hosiery are the corporate sponsors for this event with kick-off parties Thursday, September 21 in sixty-two markets simultaneously sponsored by Jaguar. In an effort to educate women about how to perform a monthly self-breast exam, FIJI water has generously underwritten 250,000 shower cards this year.

All of Saks Fifth Avenue's windows will reflect the Fashion Targets Breast Cancer theme. From September 14 through 28, the windows will showcase images taken by photographer Sandi Fellman. "Portraits of Hope," a photo exhibition, captures the strength and optimism of nineteen women and one man who courageously deal with the disease on a daily basis.

Many of Saks Fifth Avenue's vendors will match Saks' two percent donation. Look for the Fashion Targets Breast Cancer bulls-eye logo denoting participating designers and vendors. A partial list includes Ellen Tracy, Pamela Dennis, Anne Klein, Michael Kors, Ralph Lauren and many others...

The Fashion Targets Breast Cancer T-shirt underwritten by Donna Karan Hosiery, twenty-five dollars. Judith Leiber "Triumph", a limited edition pear-shaped minaudiere with a light floral pattern on a rhinestone background is $34.00. On the corner is a pink ribbon in support of breast cancer, a Kate Spade bag with leather straps and a Swarovski crystal and aquamarine tattoo in the shape of a target.

Donna Karan Hosiery has completely underwritten this year's Fashion Targets Breast Cancer T-shirt. Donna Karan, one of the worlds' foremost designers, has generously enabled 100 percent off all proceeds of the $25 retail price to go directly to FTBC. This year's style features a V-neck with a target logo below the left shoulder.

Donna Karan was instrumental in the creation of FTBC, a charitable initiative of the Council of Fashion Designers of America, Inc. The FTBC campaign united fashion designers in a common cause - to eradicate breast cancer through fund raising initiatives. Brazilian supermodel Gisele Bundchen is the face for FTBC worldwide and appears on the cover of Saks' September catalog promoting its shopping weekend to benefit FTBC.

Saks Fifth Avenue, in partnership with the Council of Fashion Designers of America, will sponsor a gala shopping weekend to launch Breast Cancer Awareness Month. All Saks Fifth Avenue stores, saksfifthavenue.com and Folio will donate two percent of sales, and Off 5th will donate one percent of sales, made during these four days to national and local breast cancer charities. The funds will support research, education, advocacy and outreach programs.

To order the T-shirt, or for further information, call 888-771-2323 or click onto saksfifthavenue.com.

POLICE BLOTTER

Burglaries have reached new heights. In Bridgehampton, on Lopers Path, a victim reported the loss of a pair of earrings valued at merely $40,000 and a pearl necklace worth a cool $360,000. The jewelry was stolen from a safe that only the victim and her assistant knew the combination to. According to police, there are no suspects.

In East Quogue, where the jewelry is smaller, thieves hit a house-party and visited a few bedrooms. Among the missing goods are $40 in cash, assorted cards (credit, ATM, licenses, etc.), a wrist watch valued at $1,600, a digital camera worth $1,000 and some jewelry including a diamond necklace valued at $5,000. The total loss was $8,875.

In the strange thefts department, a plastic jug, apparently rather large, containing $3,000, in change, was stolen. The heavy money was taken from a home on Cypress Avenue in Flanders. Police are looking someone with jingling pockets and a hernia.

A homemaking thief hit a Springs home on Deep Six Drive at some point last month. Missing are a corkscrew, an iron, some bowls, towels, glasses and some books.

The Montauk Flag Filcher was back in action. This time 15 American Flags were filched from flagpoles on Main Street, each worth $75. How patriotic.

In the Northwest Woods of East Hampton, a shrubbery stealer snatched Stanley Stein's six juniper bushes worth $480. The Hedges Banks resident reported the crime.

Also in Northwest, a Shrubby Stealer stole two mountain laurels, two andromaeda shrubs, five Alberto spruces and eight mugo pines. The total value of the plants, taken from North Hollow Drive, is estimated at $595. It is believed that the botanical booty was stolen on the same day as the six junipers mentioned above.

Sixmilecross in Montauk was the scene of a bar scuffle.

Robert Kavanagh, of Ireland, was struck by another patron, leaving him with a black eye and a bludgeoned ear. His attacker thought he was someone else. He was sorry, and so no charges were filed.

In East Hampton, on Hedges Lane, Bill Brewer complained that several boys, described as preadolescent, ran naked across his backyard. The boys stopped briefly and did a little jig for Mr. Brewer. The streakers' parents have been spoken to by police.

In Sagaponack, Renee Igoe of Sag Harbor reported the theft of her cell phone, two credit cards, and her ATM card from her car while it was parked on Gibson Lane. A few days later, the cards as well as her driver's license were found scattered across Mitchells Lane in Bridgehampton by this writer, while on my way home from the Dan's Papers office on my motorcycle. The items were turned in to the Southampton Town Police.

Dan's LETTERS

THE BEST THINGS ARE FREE

Dear Dan,

Thank you so much for recommending Ms. Marcus to me. I have written to her today and this has given me much happiness and hope for my stories.

You are very kind.

It's out the door to pick up this week's paper. Sometimes the best things in life are free. Like Dan's Papers.

FRESH AIR FUND SAYS THANKS

Dear Dan,

Thank you for the coverage you gave The Fresh Air Fund this season by featuring The Fund's local Friendly Town in Dan's Papers. The exposure provides a tremendous help to our ongoing efforts to encourage more volunteer host families in your community to open their homes to disadvantaged youngsters from New York City. We are grateful for your help in sharing the wonderful heartwarming experience of Fresh Air host families with your readers.

On behalf of The Fresh Air Fund, our local volunteers in your community and the thousands of city children who benefit from free Fresh Air programs, thank you again for your support.

JOURNALISTIC INTEGRITY PREVAILS

Dear Dan,

My wife and I would like to extend our gratitude to you and Jerry Cimisi for picking up our story about our struggle with the Suffolk County Water Authority. For the first time since we have appealed to the media for assistance, we feel that someone finally got it right. Mr. Cimisi's investigative skills, sense of balance and fair play combined with his journalistic integrity are an asset and are to be commended.

We would like to clarify one item that SCWA's general counsel, Tim Hopkins stated in your article. He is quoted as saying: "the Molloy's actually did not open an account in their name until this past August, almost a year after they had bought the house. During all that time the bills had been going out to the previous owner."

SCWA informed us of the previous owner's debt (which actually exceeded $5,500), on 7 October, 1999 as we attempted to establish an account with them. They refused to set up our account unless we agreed to assume the previous owner's debt. At no time did we refuse to pay our water bills. Our repeated efforts to establish an account were routinely denied for seven months. SCWA knew from 30 September, 1999 that we resided at the property in question. In May 2000, my wife called again to request a bill. This time, SCWA responded by showing up on our doorstep threatening to cut off our water unless we paid them nearly $1,900.00.

We finally set up an account with SCWA in May 2000, but all account and payment information was deleted by Regional Manager, Steve Romano. His reasoning was that SCWA would no longer require us to pay the amount in arrears from the time the previous owner stopped paying until the time we closed on the house (roughly $1,900.00). But they would hold us responsible for the remainder of the previous owner's contract (approximately $3,299.00 as of 8 August 2000). Additionally he waived the deposit fee and would not require us to sign a contract (this transaction is on the tape we provided Mr. Cimisi). My wife said we would pay the surcharge under protest, due their impending threat to cut off our water if we did not comply.

At no time did we, as Mr. Hopkins claimed, agree "to assume the payments" of the previous owner's contract.

By shedding light on this issue, you have brought greater public awareness of such questionable practices. It is our hope that from here on, steps will be taken to see that such occurrences never happen again. Where others have failed, Dan's Papers excelled with guts and style. Our sincerest thanks,

Paul & Patricia Molloy

EVA HAS A GOOD HOME BECAUSE OF MANY DEAR DAN,

This is an open letter to thank all friends of my pit bull Eva and to celebrate the happy ending to her plight:

Eva Has Been Adopted

A brief history for those of you who are not familiar with Eva's story: I found Eva on November 28, 1999 in the South Bronx. She had been bred recently and when she was no longer of use, had been let go on the streets. She was hospitalized at the Animal Medical Center and given lots of love and attention. Over time, Eva grew up to be a most beautiful and noble animal with an amazingly good disposition. She was the talk of the town and her beauty turned heads.

I rescue and foster cats. Because of this, I knew I could not give Eva a permanent home. Nevertheless, I was optimistic that it would be fairly easy to place her. Why not? I reasoned, she is so beautiful and has such a great temperament... I overlooked what would become the biggest obstacle: dear Eva is a pit bull. What ensued was a most arduous and trying task in the tri-state area. Had it not been for the many good people that jumped on the bandwagon on behalf of Eva's cause, my efforts would have been fruitless.

Let me begin by saying thank you to Eva's new parents.

A wonderful couple who took her in without hesitation and with open arms. Thanks to them Eva has plenty of land on which to run, much love and other pooches to play with. Thank you to Dr. Lisa Ireland, Lynette Pineda and Terry Moon of the Animal Medical Center. They met Eva that first night when she was hospitalized, looked after her health and yes, hush-hush, allowed her out of her quarters to play free around the ward. To Jenna Robbins of Dan's Papers, Peter Boody and Ethel of the Shelter Island Reporter: The stories you published about Eva led to her adoption, and for that I will always be grateful. Thank you to Father Charles Dougherty of Our Lady of the Isle for his kind words about her during the blessing of the animals at Shelter Island in July. To Barry her dog walker. To Marni Horowitz of Far Hills, NJ and Pattie Block of Darien, CT for their great efforts in spreading the word and trying to get a home for Eva. To Lina Sorenson who gave Eva a walk during an emergency I had. And, yes to the many other good humans who joined Eva's battles and whose efforts allowed her to win the war.

I saved Eva from an almost certain death. Beyond that, much of the credit belongs to a very special woman whose love and support, intelligence and creativity, knowledge about dogs, determination, perseverance and hard work were the driving forces to this happy conclusion. Eva and I were lucky to meet Melanie Coronetz, "The Dog Woman", during a Spring evening while Eva walked me down Fifth Avenue in New York City. Melanie became Eva's friend and benefactress. She trained Eva to sit and do a few tricks, took her for walks, bought her toys and other goodies, took her for a brief vacation in the country, drove us to New Jersey, Westchester and dog shows, sent emails, put Eva's picture on the internet and did mailings to veterinarians, all in a colossal effort to land Eva a good home. It was Melanie who wrote a beautiful description/story about Eva and had it published in Dan's Papers. It was this story that caught the eye of her new parents. Thank you Melanie, you are very special to Eva and me.

Anna and Eva

In closing, I could not find words more appropriate and beautiful than those last lines of Black Beauty written by Anne Sewell, "I have nothing to fear, and here my story ends, my troubles are over; and I am at home."

A Sense of Place. Sometimes a building or a piece of land just feels like it couldn't possibly exist anywhere else. So it is with this delightful 18th century farmhouse which was once part of a large dairy farm in Amagansett. Beautifully renovated, it features 3 bedrooms, 3 baths, large country eat-in kitchen, and three working fireplaces. There's a separate guest quarters part of the house and a wonderful antique barn on the property. Well located near shops and beaches. New to the market. Co-Exclusive. $595,000.
